Miss Winstead Entertains Faculty; Honors Recent Bride

Saturday afternoon, Miss Blanche Winstead entertained the faculty of Roxboro Central School, a few friends and at the same time complimenting Mrs. Lindsay Wagstaff, the bride of the faculty, at her lovely home in the Concord section.

Beautiful spring flowers, irises and white lilies were used in profusion throughout the lower floor. Rummy was played at four tables with the following guests playing: Misses Nell Woods, Inda Collins, Elizabeth Raines, Claire Harris, Maude Montague, Mary Winstead, Evelyn Satterfield, Mesdames Clyde Bowen, V. O. Blalock, J. D. Winstead, with Miss Sue Merritt coming in for refreshments.

After several progressions beautiful and delicious refreshments carrying out the bridal color of green and white were served. Lovely gifts were presented to Mrs. Harold Crowder for receiving the low score and to Miss Claire Harris for high score. The bride, Mrs. Wagstaff, was presented with a corsage and a piece of silver in her pattern.

Need Greater For Chaplains

Army Calls For Chaplains
Atlanta, May 8.—"So alarming is the shortage in the Chaplain Corps of the Army, that every congregation, every minister both in and out of uniform should be aroused to action." These words, spoken recently by Chaplain Edward R. Carter, Jr., Deputy Theatre Chaplain for the European Theatre of Operations, reflect a situation that is as serious today on the home front as it is in the fighting zones abroad, according to advice just received from Fourth Service Command Headquarters in Atlanta.

"I would like to give the widest possible circulation to Chaplain Carter's statement," Chaplain Ralph W. Rogers said in Atlanta yesterday, "and to emphasize the fact that the seven Southeastern states, where my own Chaplaincy extends, are faced with a similar crisis, in which spiritual guidance for our soldiers is clearly inadequate at the present time."

Stating that 120 additional Chaplains are urgently needed in this Service Command, and that they must be supplied by the first of July, Chaplain Rogers continued to quote his overseas colleague, with whose statement, he said, he was in complete agreement.

Electricity At Wallace Short

Raleigh, May 8.—A recording volt meter test of the supply of electricity in Wallace shows that the "distribution of electric current is not keeping pace with the demand," according to C. D. Baucum, superintendent of the Weights and Measures division of the State Department of Agriculture.

Baucum, who supervised the test, charged that the Tidewater Light and Power Company is failing to provide electricity to its Wallace clients in compliance with the terms of the franchise, which he said stipulates that the voltage should not vary more than six volts.

Medium-sized eggs are as good a buy as large eggs of the same grade when they are one-eighth cheaper. Small eggs are as economical as large eggs when they are one-fourth cheaper.

Gets Drainage Project Soon

Plymouth, May 8.—Plans for a seven-mile drainage canal involving approximately 10,000 acres of land lying in the area of the new Tidewater Expedition Station five miles east of here are being drawn up and work on the project should get under way the latter part of July, according to J. L. Rea, Jr., assistant director in charge of the station.

Rea said that 5,000 acres of land now of little value should be suitable for cultivation upon completion of the work.

The canal will be 12 feet in width at its head on the Tidewater Farm and will be about 25 feet for several hundred yards before it empties into a tributary of the Roanoke River, explained Rea.

Tobacco Planted At Rocky Mount

Rocky Mount, May 8.—Planting of tobacco in the Rocky Mount-Wilson area is virtually complete, according to R. E. Currin, Jr., assistant director of the Upper Coastal Plain Experiment Station here.

Currin said that "although the labor situation continues bad, the schools' cooperation in closing early each day is helping materially with the production of crops, and they are virtually all planted." He said the relatively cold weather of the past several days is retarding growth, however.

Definite Program On Spuds Wanted

Raleigh, May 8.—Randall B. Etheridge, head of the State Department of Agriculture Markets division, has requested Marvin Jones, director of the War Food Administration, to "make a public announcement in the near future on the support which WFA will give to sweet potatoes from the time they are harvested to the time they are marketed."

Pointing out that "the farmers feel they are entitled to this information before the crop is planted," Etheridge asked for a statement on what the support price would be, whether it would apply to both green and cured stock, and the period it would cover.
