EFFECTS OF THE ULTIMATUM

Speed-up in the war against Japan is the first result to be expected from Japan's refusal to agree to the terms of surrender proposed last week by China, Great Britain and the United States.

Only unpredictable factor in the length of the war against Japan is the reaction of the Oriental mind, the possessors of which may decide to die rather than live.

THERE HAS TO BE AN END TO MARK A BEGINNING

To at least one Person County army officer recently stationed in England while recovering from wounds, the Liberal victory of Maj. Clement Attlee, now British prime minister, came as no surprise.

Observers are drawing parallels between the emergence of Attlee and that of President Truman, the implications being that Churchill, for all his noble efforts in times of crisis had finished his work much as had President Roosevelt and that times in Great Britain as in the United States were ripe for change.

All in all, the victory of Attlee in 1945, is no more shocking than was that of McDonald in his time. The world moves and so does the British Empire, the leaders of which may now be still better able to work diplomatically with the United States and with Russia.

GOOD GUINEA PIGS ARE WE

Here last week and coming again soon for a second survey trip, six new public health students from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, are interested in how Person County and Roxboro live, what is done here in government, in education and health.

The North Carolina school of public health, which has a reputation as far north as Yale and Harvard and as far west as the University of Southern California, is of course responsible for sending these six students over here to find out why and how we "tick".

education, in government, in health or what have you. Perhaps, the answer as to our worth for survey purposes is that we keep on emerging above the pioneer level. The State, too, is doing a good job thereat, and Person is keeping up, pleasantly, cheerfully and with good will, although we could shock some of our visitors by saying that the job locally has been and is a lot harder than it appears to look and run visitors, no matter how intelligent they may be.

BLACK TOES, WHITE HEELS

What to do with overseas veterans who come back and are emotionally up-set as well as physically wounded is a problem, of which Roxboro has had good illustration in two separate instances in the past few days.

Here is the first boy, one whose toes are black, not from dirt and not because God made them that way. They are cracked and bruised and bleed easily, sticking out over the edges of open-work sandals, the only shoes he can wear. His heels are white and clean, like those of anybody else.

Friends of the boy who live here and who were in service with him say that his battle experiences have given him a mental twist, not violent, but enough to explain a braggadocio manner made colorful by strong language and a rather pitiful boasting as to the prowess of men from his native state, variously identified as Georgia or California.

He may have gone back to camp, but he is somebody's boy, and a problem, just as was the Spanish-Italian American soldier, the one from Brooklyn, who talked too much.

That Spanish-Italian soldier in the uniform of his adopted country, the United States, is the second, apparently "off the beam" soldier of which Roxboro has had recent experience. He came here at three in the afternoon one day and apparently meant to spend the night. He did that, but not in the expected place, and all because he allegedly made some misunderstood remarks to women and reportedly chased some children into a yard. Irate citizens telephoned police.

The handling of such men requires tact and consideration, both from civilians and from the police. Locking men up is the easier way out, not the best and of the two soldiers mentioned here, we think that the one with black and white feet, who was delicately handled by civilian and soldier friends, has the better impression of Roxboro. It is the job of the police to lock people up, but it is also the job of the police and of citizens, too, to think twice before resorting to or requesting such measures, more especially when those who go on the loose are returned soldiers or sailors.

There are plenty of civilians who will say that the soldiers and sailors ought to behave, ought not to get drunk and try to forget booming guns and bloody, headless, armless, legless bodies—and the real and the imaginary ills that the survivors come back with. All of that is true, but we cannot escape the knowledge that our own obligation to help the sick and the wounded, whether in body or spirit, is much the greater.

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING

FAIR TO CONGRESSMEN?
Christian Science Monitor
The Wisconsin farmer who asks his Congressman to help get him a wife has raised a pretty question of Congressional ethics.

There was a time when a Congressman's chief duty was to furnish garden seeds on demand to every voter who applied. He is also expected to get faithful party workers on the public pay roll as census takers, highway inspectors, and the like. He's supposed to furnish German cannon for the courthouse lawn and to arrange for the spending of pork-barrel money in his home district. We've even heard of a Congressman's being asked to see to it that the wife of the superintendent of a Federal institution was supplied with a maid. But should he be required to play John Alden for constituents? If he fails he may lose a vote, but if he succeeds he may be swamped with requests. King Lemuel was right about the kind most men demand. "Her price is far above rubies."

A SHOOTING WAR

Chicago Daily News
The army ordnance department can now tell exactly how much gunpowder it took to blow up Germany. The artillery fired 48,322,539 shells.

Ultimatum To Japs Framed By Three Nations

Washington.—Here are the terms of the unconditional surrender ultimatum given Japan Thursday by Britain, China and the United States:

- 1. Elimination "for all time" of the authority and influence of the militarist, industrialists and others who have deceived and misled the people of Japan, and establishment of a new order in Japan of peace, security and justice.
2. Allied occupation of Japanese territory until such a new order is established and until Japan's war making power is destroyed.
3. Enforcement of the Cairo declaration which strips Japan of all her conquests since the turn of the century; and limitation of Japanese sovereignty to the four principal home islands and some minor ones.
4. Disarming of all Japanese forces and permission for them to return home.
5. "Stern justice" for war criminals but no plan to destroy the Japanese as a nation or a race.
6. Maintenance of all industries needed to sustain Japanese economy, but an end to those which would enable Japan to rearm.
7. Withdrawal of occupation forces when these objectives are accomplished and a "peacefully inclined and responsive government" has been established.
No mention was made of the Japanese Emperor. The American attitude toward him has been the subject of bitter controversy. Officials explained that that issue was being left open—to be decided when Japan surrenders or is beaten to her knees. They emphasized that the proclamation does not prejudice the ability of the Allies to take any step they deem desirable on the Emperor issue.

Americans Lose Lives As Prison Vessel Sinks

Washington, July 29.—The War Department disclosed today that 1,001 American prisoners of war lost their lives when a Japanese prison ship was torpedoed last December.

Actual sinking of the vessel, which carried 1,600 captured Americans, was revealed last Feb. 22. At that time it was estimated that at least 800 were killed.

The vessel left Manila Dec. 13, 1944, apparently bound for Japan. It was torpedoed two days later in Subic Bay. The Japanese reported that 942 Americans were killed outright, 59 died later, two survived and escaped capture, and 618 survived and were taken on to Japan. The United Press obtained its story of the tragedy last February from one of the two survivors.

Meditator Arrives In United States

Miami, Fla.—Meditator Robert Cook was scheduled to arrive in Miami today to hear the wage dispute between the Flight Radio Officers Association and Pan American Airways. The controversy resulted in two strikes by the operators of P. A. A.'s Latin-American division last week, but both times the men returned to work before schedules were affected.

Machine guns fired 497,707,000 rounds. The infantry fired 439,281,000, not counting 97,369,000 rounds of pistol ammunition. Also they threw 4,853,888 hand grenades. To get it into round numbers, the total of small-arm bullets is near a billion. At the battle of Waterloo in 1815 a count showed that one man was killed for every 450 bullets fired. Since then we have tremendously increased the accuracy and range of firearms. Yet, while we do not know accurately the number of Germans we killed, it is quite evident that many more bullets are fired for each man killed than was the case in 1815.

And the amazing thing is that America should produce and get into the hands of troops on the firing line such huge quantities of ammunition. Of that we can be proud.

German Prisoners Return To Their Own Country

Camp Shanks, N. Y.—Stony-faced and listless, 1,483 ailing German prisoners of war today marched in a shuffle-footed and bedraggled procession aboard the hospital ship Frances Y. Slanger for transportation back to their devastated homeland. For men about to return home, to see again families and friends in a Germany no longer under incessant pounding, they were a curiously dispirited lot.
