The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Luther Whitt.

AN APPRECIATION

Being impossible for me to personally thank each one for the kindnesses shown me while in the hospital I want to take this method to assure each one that their every act was appreciated. Many of my friends called personally to visit me, others sent flowers and still others wrote letters. If ever a man appreciates expressions of this nature it is when he is flat on his back in a hospital. These expressions coming daily was truly the best medicine I could possibly have had.

My best wishes to every one, and personally I assure you that I will ever remember you for these kindnesses.

Truly, your friend,
G. B. SHORT.

To Meet

The Executive Board of the Parent-Teachers Association of Bushy Fork School will meet Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock. All chairmen are urged to attend. Several matters of importance will be discussed.

New Program Seen In Status Of War Workers

Washington—War workers between 18 and 25 years of age will lose their essential draft classification when they lose their jobs, Selective Service said today.

Answering queries, Selective Service said the situation is the same as it always has been: If a man no longer is essential to the war effort, he is subject to the draft.

It said it is up to each draft board to deal with its particular problems, but it pointed out that not all of the physically fit in the 18-25 year group necessarily will be drafted.

"Many of these have families," a Selective Service spokesman said.

"And we are continuing our policy of taking single men first. If we get enough of these to fill the armed services' wants, then, of course, we will not need to take family men regardless of their age. On the other hand, if we do need

Truman Includes Henry Wallace In Conference

Washington—Organized labor has hailed President Truman's surprise inclusion of Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace in the forthcoming labor-management conference on post-war industrial peace as an augury for success of the venture.

Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach disclosed after a White House conference that Wallace would be invited to a preliminary meeting September 5 to help plan for the national parley whose principal objective will be to find a substitute for the War Labor Board for handling industrial disputes.

Also attending the White House session, and expected to be present at the September 5 meeting, were President Eric A. Johnston of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, President Ira Mosher of the National Association of Manufacturers, President Phillip Murray of the CIO, President William Green of the AFL, and Reconversion Director John W. Snyder.

them, we'll have to take them."

Selective Service now has a policy of not drafting anyone who has reached his 26th birthday. The spokesman said he had no idea how many war workers are in the 16-25 group.

Return Delayed

Chungking—The return from Japanese imprisonment of Lt. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, hero of Bataan and Corregidor, has been delayed several more days, it was announced today.

Sermon for Sunday, September 2, 1945

ideas Master Us
By Chaplain Edwin R. Hartz, Long Island, New York, Formerly of Roxboro

Among the most powerful influences in his world for good or ill is in an idea which takes hold of a powerful personality and changes history for countless generations.

Back in 3700 B. C. the idea of building an everlasting monument took hold of Cheops in Egypt. He set his subjects to work on it. For thirty years over 100,000 men toiled on the red-granite structure that today covers thirteen acres of ground.

3700 years later an idea of love mastered a young man in Nazareth. It possessed his group of followers. Today we date our calendars from its beginning. Any way one looks at it, he discovers that this dream at work in the world became a turning point in mankind's journey.

If a man will push the meaning of this principle into his own situation, he will discover that one need not be brilliant or talented to be mastered by a worthy goal in life. He simply needs to put it to work.

As a matter of fact, the world's best known men were the ordinary, everyday working people who believed strongly in their work and applied themselves diligently to it. Such a sailor as Columbus was very ordinary when compared with the educated and daring seamen of his day. But the idea of a shorter route to India knocked at the door of his mind and he let it in and that idea made history.

This is an hour when ideas are astir in the air. Our future lies in the hope that they will take hold of our youth at home and abroad.

Victory calls for the rebuilding of the world. Millions of people in Eastern Asia, in the Middle East, and in Latin America "over the fence" neighbors, will desire the comforts and conveniences that we share. They will need capital and technical assistance. Above all, they will desire the four great freedoms which American lads have known since birth.

The friendships of these people will be won not by guns and bombs and war, nor by greed and exploitation, but by unselfish sympathy and cooperation.

The chief concern of many chaplains and ministers is that the youth of this generation shall not miss being used by such "ideas." Now is the hour for youth to set the sights right; not only for the months of this bitter war but for the years to come. If youth will keep its vision clear, then America will be proud of these humanitarian ideas that used its sons in this generation.
