Christmas at the Congregational Church.

Christmas Services at the Congregational Church were largely attended, both at morning service and at Sunday School. The pastor discoursed upon the "First Christmas Anthem" from Luke 2:14, and in closing spoke in part as follows, "Our Cuban war still lingers, and the soil of the far off Isles is crimsoned with Lawton's and Logan's blood, and others just as brave and true. England pours forth her trained soldiery to be slaughtered in the Transvaal, and as one says, 'The century has not shown a darker week in British military history.' Groans, tears, blood, death! How dis-sonant all with the anthem of peace, and fixing our minds for the moment on this strife, and thinking that the two great Christian nations are the only ones at war today, and they in far off territory, does it not seem almost splendid irony to sing 'Peace on earth, good will to men'? But this is a superficial view. The deeper thought is, we are really in another world from the one into which the first Christmas Carol was born. Great progress has been made. The nations through their wrestling nights of history have seen 'the face of God'. To the man of open mind and open vision 'There ever glimpses on his sight, Through present wrong eternal right And step by step, since time began, He sees the steady gain of man.'

* * * The anthem looks up; its first strain swells to heaven; it glorifies God for the incarnation—the mighty and mysterious fact of human history. This is the divine order God first, then man. The soul first kindles its life in God, then sings its peace anthem to the world.

Our Christmas is a true one only as God is first. Is it not oft a mere gift giving and receiving social affair, associated with dinners and cheap mirth rather than joy born of God? We empty Christmas of its full meaning if Christ has not been born 'in us the hope of glory.'"

Mr. Edward O'Donnell, wife, and five children, from Boston, have been at the Southern Pines House this week, and like it so well that they have rented one of Mr. Pond's cot-

THE FIREMEN'S BENEFIT

Southern Pines is very proud of the people who gave such a clever entertainment on Christmas afternoon and evening. As an amateur acting it was a decided success and as a benefit, the good attendance speaks for itself.

Not the least deserving of praise was the music furnished by our new Octette Orchestra, which bids fair to become a prominent factor in our growing town.

One who has visited a lunatic asylum may perhaps more fully appreciate the trials of Miss Breneman and Mr. Wakeman in their scene, "A Pair of Lunatics," and their satisfaction in discovering their own sanity.

'My Lord in Livery' was interesting in its diversity of characters and the easy rendering of their parts by all the actors. A portly, conceited, blundering old family butler could hardly have been more pleasantly personified than by Mr. Brewer; but special mention can hardly be given, each did so well.

Little Ethel Grover rendered her two songs in her usual dainty way; and Miss Hart's reading would have graced a much larger house, both in rendition and selection.

The last scene, "A Happy Pair," has received considerable praise. Mr Williams certainly has a happy faculty of portraying the troubled, husband, and Miss Breneman that of a devoted wife.

Taking it all together, it seems to be the unanimous opinion that as an amateur performance it could hardly have been excelled.

Good pine wood for stove or fireplace furnished on short notice by Cameron and McQueen.

We were pleased to receive a call from J. J. McNerny, who with his family is spending the winter at Piney Woods Inn. He has found great benefit to his health and admires our town very much.

The Congregational Christmas tree was laden with fruit Monday evening; there was a good attendance, the tree was shaken, and the children all made happy.

ber Patch & Williams are headquarters for honest goods.

W. E. Giles received a letter from H. D. Saul, who went to San Antonio Florida about two weeks ago. He reports himself well and says that they commence to pick strawberries next week. He expects to return to Southern Pines about February 15th.
