RHEUMATISM.

Whatever may be the primary cause in cases of rheumatism, gout and allied diseases, the final condition is always one of thickening of the cartilages and other structures of the joint, generally associated with deposits, so that function is impaired or lost.

NO MEDICINE

Ever has been and probably never will be found that can be relied on when these diseases become chronic. The modern hot air appliances at this institution are peculiarly adapted to their treatment. Though water boils at 212°, yet it is possible, owing to recent improvements in this apparatus, to give a patient from 800 to 500 degrees of heat without discomfort. It can be readily seen what a wonderful effect this high temperature must have on adhesions and deposits.

THE FOREIGN MATTER

Around the joint is softened and finally absorbed. Not only is the affected joint acted on, but at the same time the whole system is cleansed of the rheumatic poison. This latter feature makes the treatment also valuable in rheumatism confined to muscular tissues. Here, as in many other diseases treated here, electricity plays a prominent part. Galvanism is especially valuable through its property of liquifying and softening tissues. No case should be regarded as hopeless where these remedies have not been treated by an expert.

We had a very pleasant call at the Piney Woods Inn a day or two since. Mr. St. John, the gentlemanly proprietor kindly showed the writer over the house. Improvements are under way, both in heating and lighting. The spacious drawing and dining rooms have a very attractive appearance and must, withal, be exceedingly social when the season is on. Already a number of guests have arrived and many more soon coming.
