out there and getting 16 rebounds against a team like that."

Although the Terps kept hitting, they still couldn't put the Tar Heels away.

With 1:36 left, Rasheed Wallace made a steal and passed up court to Pearce Landry, who went to Jerry Stackhouse for a dunk. Maryland's lead was five, and it looked like UNC might pull off its third major comeback in as many road games.

"For us to shoot as poorly as a team, and for us to still be in it at the end really says a lot," Donald Williams said.

But Maryland wouldn't fold down the stretch. It hit 10-of-11 free throws in the final two minutes.

"We're definitely a never-say-die team," Landry said. "They just plain beat us."

"Jinx. Curse.

Omen," is how Rasheed Wallace described the imminent No. 1-ranking Saturday.

But the No. 1 ranking hadn't been a jinx for the Tar Heels against the Terps in the past. Tonight, they insisted it wasn't a factor.

UNC had been No. 1 three other times in the last two years before tonight, and it had won all three.

This time was different. "It's a credit to Maryland because we just couldn't stop them," Landry said.

"They were breaking our press with ease, and even when they got into the half court, they were getting the ball down low and getting some easy baskets. And Rhodes was very negative from the outside."

Rhodes' negative karma for the Tar Heels began when Gary Williams called a timeout with 8:23 left in the first half. After UNC used an 11-0 run to take a 14-point lead, the Terps used the 3-point shot to fight back.

Simpkins came out of the timeout and drilled a 3. After a Landry air ball, Maryland cut the lead to single digits as 6-8 forward Mario Lucas canned a 3-pointer from the top of the key with 5:25 left.

Rhodes would hit two more 3-pointers before the half ended and then gave the Terps the lead for good in the half with 1:49 left.

The end result of that second timeout was a 23-6 run to end the first period with a 39-38 Maryland lead.

With the win, Maryland tied the Tar Heels for first place in the conference. The Terps would have taken the ACC lead for themselves if they had not lost to Georgia Tech Saturday.

"The only down side to it is that I wish we could have gotten the win Saturday," Simpkins said. "But we'll keep plodding along and moving up."

Maryland Backcourt E-Rhodes Tar Heels

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Going into Tuesday night's matchup at Cole Field House between North Carolina and Maryland, the focus was down low, where super sophomores Joe Smith and Rasheed Wallace make their livings.

UNC should have looked outside, because that's where the real action was.

The Terrapin backcourt of Duane Simpkins and Johnny Rhodes burned No. 1 UNC for 21 points each in No. 8 Maryland's 86-73 win. The duo connected on 16-of-23 shots, including six 3-pointers.

"Every game someone else is going to step up," UNC forward Dante Calabria said. "That's why we play the game — somebody's going to come through."

The Maryland guard tandem certainly did that in the first half when Maryland was down 30-16 with 8:23 left.

The Terps went on a 23-6 run, including 16 points from Simpkins and Rhodes. Simpkins came out of a timeout and threw up a rainbow 3-pointer that hit the back iron, went skyward and dropped in.

"It was definitely the break that we needed," Simpkins said. "Went it went in I said, 'I hope we can get something started here.'"

Maryland head coach Gary Williams said that his team was getting good looks because Joe Smith, Exree Hipp and Keith Booth were taking the ball inside.

"We got some open 3s by first going inside," Williams said. "That's why Duane and Johnny got good looks, because of our ability to drive inside."

Simpkins drove for another layup, Mario Lucas hit a 3, and then it was Rhodes' turn. The junior shooting guard from Washington, D.C., drilled a 3-pointer over a flying Jerry Stackhouse, made another 3 from the top of the key, drew a foul on a layup for a 3-point play and then added another layup. Maryland was back on top, 37-36.

"The guys came off the bench, found me when I was open, and I was feeling it. So I was excited," Rhodes said.

UNC coach Dean Smith said the Tar Heels didn't concede the trey to the Terps.

"We were not giving it to him," he said. "He even hit one through a double team. We just couldn't get there."

The second half was more of the same for the Maryland bombers.

An old-fashioned 3-point play by Simpkins with just over two minutes left helped seal the contest. With Maryland up 70-63 and UNC threatening with 3-pointers, Simpkins brought the ball up court and ran the clock. He drove with less than seven seconds left and scored while drawing a foul from Shammond Williams.

The junior made the free throw and the Terps were up by 10 again.

"Duane takes the challenge," Gary Williams said. "He's played well against some of the best point guards in the conference."

North Carolina's Jeff McInnis (5) had the upper hand vs. Maryland's Duane Simpkins (10) Jan. 7, but Simpkins torched UNC for 21 points Tuesday.

Protest Over Racial Remarks Postpones UMass-Rutgers Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Students protesting racially inflammatory comments by Rutgers president Francis Lawrence staged a half-court sit-in Tuesday night, abruptly ending a basketball game between No. 4 Massachusetts and Rutgers.

The protest started with a black female student sitting at the jump ball circle just before the second half was to begin. Security guards came out to talk to her, but the protest escalated as more than 100 students joined her after about two minutes.

Officials asked Massachusetts coach John Calipari to take his players off the court. Both teams then returned to their locker rooms in the Rutgers Athletic Center. Rutgers was leading 31-29.

Police and university officials negotiated briefly with the students, while the sellout crowd of mostly whites shouted "Get off the court" and "We want hoops" to those on the court.

Lawrence, who was not at the game, has been criticized by many university students and faculty, as well as state legislators, for his comments last fall that minorities don't have the genetic background to do well on college entrance exams.

As students sat on the basketball court, several others circled them, carrying banners assailing Lawrence.

Athletic director Fred Gruninger then walked to announcer Jim Wilson and had him tell the crowd the game was suspended under the order of Atlantic 10 Conference commissioner Linda Bruno.

The contest was declared an "interrupted game," which means it can be continued. If it's not continued, Rutgers forfeits.

Fannie Lou Hamer
Growing up in the cotton fields of Ruleville, Miss., during the early 1920s acquainted Fannie Lou Hamer with the reality of oppression. The youngest of 20 children in a sharecropping family, she knew a life of struggle and resistance. Hamer is known for having formed the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party—a group that gave voice to Southern blacks at the 1965 National Democratic Convention. In 1971, Hamer ran unsuccessfully for the Mississippi senate. She founded the Freedom Farm Cooperative.
