Brandenburg Committed To Students, Not Politics

TO THE EDITOR:

Over the past year, I have gotten to know my neighbor Stacey Brandenburg very well. I want all students at UNC to know that Stacey is clearly the best choice for our next SBP. She is highly qualified, and she has a plan for the future which will benefit all of us at UNC. Most importantly though, Stacey is a real person and not some politico who is only concerned about getting power. After talking with her this year, I know that she will do a fantastic job as student body president. She is a gr mitted to studen person who is c I have talked with Stacey about her plan for the next year, and I hope that everyone will take the time to read about what she stands for. Stacey's ideas set the standard for excellence.

On Valentine's Day, please join me and vote for the person most qualified and committed to students. Vote Stacey Brandenburg for SBP.

> Dante Calabria JUNIOR BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Cunningham Represents Grad, Undergrad Interests

TO THE EDITOR:

Graduate and professional students can and should vote in Tuesday's student body election. When you cast your ballots, vote Calvin Cunningham for student body presi-dent. Cunningham will bring a responsible administration and a proven dedication to graduate and professional student issues to office. Poll sites are located in the Health office. Poll sites are located in the Health Sciences Library, the law school (for law students only), Chase, the Union, Hanes Art Center, and Granville Cafeteria.

The student body president represents your interests, as one third of the student body, as well as the interests of the undergraduate propulation. Celtin Currents. graduate population. Calvin Cunningham as committed to work with the leadership of the Graduate and Professional Stude Federation to continue and to advance a few priorities:

■ Increased stipend/health benefit levels for graduate teaching and research as-sistants. Currently, UNC-CH lags far behind its peer institutions in support of its students who carry on its teaching and research mission. GPSF has put forth a plan for salary increases which Cunningham supports. He will use the experience and political know-how which he gained lobbying the General Assembly last summer to push the GPSF plan in

Updated tuition remissions for outof-state graduate and professional students. State numbers of tuition remission levels have not increased in over a decade. Cunningham will work with the GPSF, the faculty and the University administration to make progress securing more remis-

■ Increased information technology. Graduate and professional students rely heavily on OIT services. Cunningham will ask for more dial-in modems, as well as an on-line campus calendar to keep the entire University community informed of campus happenings.
Calvin Cunningham is the candidate for student body president who has reached out to graduate and professional students by studying the pressing problems we face and addressing the GPSF Senate with a plan. His understanding of the issues will undoubtedly enable him to be an effective representative of graduate and professional student needs. It is an important year for graduate and professional students to par-ticipate in campus elections. We can make progress if we elect the candidate for stuprogress if we elect the cancelland dent body president that has an extensive working at all levels record of experience working at all levels of University administration. Cunningham is the only candidate for student body president that has taken student issues to UNC-system Board of Governors and the N.C. General Assembly. On Tuesday vote for a candidate who sets priorities and gets the job done. Graduate and professional students should vote Calvin Cunningham for student body president.

> Ramesh Krishn PRESIDENT
> GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL STUDENT > FEDERATION

Fiumara's Courage Puts Her Above Suite C Politics

TO THE EDITOR.

"I have come to the conclusion that politics is too serious a business to be left to the politicians." — Charles De Gaulle

The preceding quote best captures the essence of Jen Fiumara's campaign for student body president. Like many of us, Jen has grown tired of the constant politicalization of Suite C policies. However, unlike those of us who merely complain about student government, Jen has had the courage to do something about it. Jen Fiumara's campaign is an attempt to move the presidency away from special interest "insider" politics and to put the interests of the average Carolina student back where they have always belonged top of the SBP's agenda.

Though many people seem to forget this, to be a good candidate for SBP does not require you to have spent a majority of your time in the quagmire of Suite C politics. In fact, I would argue that the best candidate is one that has a broad know edge of LINC student life and understands that there are more important things on the minds of Carolina students than who will be involved in the next government scan-dal. In this, Jen Fiumara exemplifies the best qualities of the student body and understands our needs. Jen is an extremely effective administrator (she coordinated office last summer) and a great leader (she is chairwomen of Board). But most importantly, Jen brings an element of honesty and integrity to the job of student body president that is unsur-

With Jen Fiumara what you see is what you get. Her campaign has been based on the concept that SBP candidates too often over-promise and under-deliver. As a Carolina student who has spent the last three years watching student government from the sidelines, Jen is realistic about what the SBP can and cannot do.

Regardless of what many idealists may wish to believe, an SBP cannot cure all of our society's ills. Instead what an SBP can do is to promote the interests of the UNC student body (such as requiring spoken English proficiency for all instructors) and act as an advocate for realistic changes that

The student body's cynicism about student government has been well founded too much politics and not enough results. Jen Fiumara has had the courage to stand up for the average student and run against the status quo.

e, on Tuesday, Feb. 14, I challenge all of you (especially those who are normally too cynical to vote) to support Jen's effort and show that the average Carolina student really does matter.

> Dana Simpson PUBLIC POLICY ANALYSIS

France Ready to Tackle Controversy, Real Issues

TO THE EDITOR:

I have known Andrew France for a little over a semester and already I have seen someone who should be representing this campus. Andrew France is a person who is concerned about Carolina and has a platform to prove it. Campus safety is his first priority, as well it should be for all student body president candidates. The need for repair of our current safety measures (phones, lights, etc.) is a must.

Andrew France's promise to be avail-able to all students shows his concern for this campus. Andrew France is the kind of person who is easily approachable and he is always willing to listen. I have played intramural sports with Andrew and his ability to handle controversy is unmatched. We need someone who can handle all the bureaucracy and back-stabbing that go on in student government and still represent s' needs. The most important plank in Andrew France's platform is the promise of "Cooperation Despite Diver

A campus as diverse and changing as Carolina's needs a leader who is willing to facilitate this change and keep the interests of all students protected. Andrew's prom-ise to appoint Jeanne Fugate as his vice president should be considered not only at ce value, but also as a promise to create diversity within his own administration. We need a candidate who is going to make a stand for the expression of ideas whether they match his own personal dogma or

Carolina needs a student body president who is going to represent all students.
Carolina needs a student body president that has strong moral character. Most of all, Carolina needs a candidate that can keep their promises: "IT'S TIME FOR STUDENT GOVERNMENT YOU DON'THAVETOBE ASHAMEDOF!!" I urge you to vote for Andrew France for student body president.

David Ivey
FRESHMAN
POLITICAL SCIENCE

Garner Wouldn't Advance A Personal Agenda as SBP

TO THE EDITOR:

I write this letter to endorse and support Kelly Jo Garner for student body presi-dent. I was, until Tuesday night, Kelly's running mate for student body co-presi-dents. If anyone on this campus is qualified to speak on her platform, and her character (aside from Kelly Jo herself), I am.
Every night this week, student groups have given us, and now her, the oppornity to speak before them. Although platform may overlap in places with the platforms of other candidates, it is clear that they are six very different individuals. Yet one thing I have noticed is that several of the candidates have what they call "a vision." And, as The Daily Tar Heel pointed out on Feb. 9, 1995, many of these "visions" are impossible or already occurring

Kelly stands before the stu asking that they elect her to be their leader without any such "vision" or personal agenda to achieve. Instead, she comes with practical ideas and plausible plans of action to improve life and community on this campus for every student. Not those who agree with her, not those who do her any political favors. Her platform has been printed, and is available on-line. I won't ther repeating it. I will tell you, however, that as Kelly's running mate—and as her friend—I have come to respect and love her like no other individual I know. Kelly is a warm, compassionate, honest person. She provides no convenient facade in order to gain votes. She doesn't pander to people. Kelly doesn' ses she won't or can't keep.

Although I can no longer participate as a candidate in this election, I still feel that I am actively involved. When I see Kelly speak, I see her speak for all students, and for me. Most importantly, I know that she means, with all her being, every word she

And, to be honest, that's more than some of the people on stage with her can say. She may not promise the stars, and she may not offer to make everyone happy instantly. But she promises to fight for our community, to listen, and to do whatever she can as SBP. Vote for Kelly Jo Garner for student body president.

> Michael G. Williams JUNIOR MIDDLE GRADES EDUCATION

Simes Would Involve All In Revamping Government

TO THE EDITOR:

It is my pleasure to endorse Robert Simes for SBP. I have worked with Rob and have seen the dedication that he has ed to guaranteeing that the stucommitted to guaranteeing that the stu-dent is the most important part of this election. From the beginning, his cam-paign has focused on addressing issues relevant to the student body. While other candidates were merely gathering signa-tures, Rob was talking about his platform and convincing students of his dedication. While other candidates were putting up their posters. Rob was making nosters that their posters, Rob was making posters that listed his goals. While other candidates were making "inside" connections, Rob was talking to the students. As a senior, I have seen promises made and broken. I have seen candidates who only claim to be interested in students and their needs. I have served in student government and have seen a lot of the things that go on was talking to the students. As a senior. there. I've watched as those in Suite C sat around idly writing reports, talking to administrators, and building their own résumés. They often forget about the students and the reason they were elected. They close their doors to other students who want to get involved and leave outsiders outside "their game." Suite C should represent all the campus and should not be open only to a select few. It's time that Suite C involved all students who want to make a change in this university. It must seek out the opinion of every student on this campus, analyze that opinion, and become a common voice for the student. This is what Rob is committed to and why he's running. His goal is not to become the "top" student. His goal is simple: to voice the concern of the student body to the legislature, to the administration each other. It's why he started his campaign and how he'll finish it. You've seen the platforms, you've heard the speeches, you've read the DTH articles. I won't bore you with details. It is a plan of action, commitment and dedication to the student body. So when you vote, and I strongly encourage you to, vote for the candidate who has focused on the issues. Don't make the mistake some organizations have and vote for the person who is the most likely to win or who has the right connections. Vote for the candidate who represents the stu-dents and wants the best for the University. Vote for Robert Simes for SBP.

> DeWayne Lucas POLITICAL SCIENCE

Doyle/Zavodny Don't Want Power to Pad Résumés

TO THE EDITOR:

I could tell you that I really like them. but I'd be lying. I could tell you that their posters weren't funny, but they were.

I could tell you that Darryl calls 1-900 numbers, but I promised him that I wouldn't bring that up. I could tell you that you can reach them easily through e-mail, but they don't understand what that is.

I could tell you about their pleafform, but

I could tell you about their platform, but I don't have enough room. I could tell you that Brett won something once, but winning "chalkboard eraser for the third grade" isn't anything to put on your résumé.

I could tell you that Darryl once dated

Brett's sister, but that's a long, sad story.
I could tell you that Brett picked Darryl's name out of the phone book, but he didn't. I could tell you that every major organization on campus supports them, but that's not the truth. I could tell you that business majors make better leaders then political science majors, but you probably already know that. I could tell you that Brett types 60 words a minute and cooks "a mean meat loaf," but I think his domestic skills are highly overrated.

I could tell you that they read the astro logical column religiously, but they can't read. I could tell you that Darryl's mom is speaker of the House, but she's overqualified. I could tell you that they watch C-Span at least 3 hours a day, but they don't.

I could tell you that Brett was an juror in the O.J. trial, but he was released after the camera in the courtroom caught him picking his nose. I could tell you that they know lots of people in student government, but I don't want to turn you off. I could tell you that Darryl had long hair, but he lost it in a freak boating accident. I could tell you that they have lots of friends, but who calls three "lots" anyway? I could tell you to vote for another candidate, but none of the other candidates paid me.

Seriously though, I will tell you that Brett and Darryl are honest, hard-working and committed. They have real, practical goals that will help unify the class of 1996. They aren't in this to pad their résumés. Rather, they are in this to ensure the rising senior class that next year will be the best year possible. They truly are the best candidates. Vote Brett Doyle and Darryl Zavodny for senior class president and vice

> Ryan Coleman JUNIOR

Vote Inscoe/King for Their Experience, Teamwork

TO THE EDITOR: Brent Inscoe and Brad King exemplify the highest ideals of service and leadership. I am honored to present to The Daily Tar Heel readers this pair of candidates for senior class president and vice president, respectively. Inscoe and King ar respectively. Inscoe and King are committed to the development of the class of 1996. They have identified two areas which they feel would most benefit our senior class: ENJOYMENT and EMPLOYMENT. Inscoe and King focus on enjoyment because they want our senior year to be a happily remembered one. They propose a Senior Night on Franklin where each week seniors would receive special discounts at participating businesses and the most exciting and event-filled Senior Week ever. However, they also recognize that not only should seniors have FUN, seniors should also have FOCUS. This is where the emment comes along: while having a od time is a great part of senior year, what truly will be remembered is not how many senior weeks there were. What will be truly remembered is how prepared we were for the job market and the upper echelons of higher education. Inscoe and King propose a Senior Activities Board, a bulletin board of information to be posted in a central campus facility that details information about job fairs and recruit-ment, interview skills and standardized test information. They also propose a Senior Speakers Series catering to the interests and skills of a different major each month. While all of these ideas are while, what separates Inscoe and King from other candidates is not their commitent to giving to seniors but their com ment to having seniors give back. This is why they propose a Senior Giving Tree for Kwanzaa, Hanukkah and Christmas sea-Kwanzaa, Hanukkah and Christmas sea-sons. They also plan to develop a Peer Advising system womanned and manned by seniors for the benefits of all students. As I stated earlier, Inscoe and King exem-plify the highest ideals of service and lead-ership- All of the projects that Inscoe and King have proposed have been extensively researched and are practical and reason-able. They have done their homework! Inscoe and King have worked in numerous campus organizations including the Camcampus organizations including the Campus Y and the Yackety Yack. They have pus Y and the Yackety 1 acc. the experience. Inscoe and King the experience are other and with worked with each other and with us in ny capacities. They have the chemistry and the respect for each other. They are a team and they are team builders. JOIN THEIR TEAM! Be responsible students and vote. Vote Inscoe and King for senior class president and vice president for Enjoyment, Employment and more

> Michelle Johnson SENIOR COMMUNICATIONS AND AFRICAN-AMERICAN STUDIES

For Years, Johnston/Marin Have Made a Difference

TO THE EDITOR:

Why should people who care about making a difference care about a senior class election? Senior Nights at He's Not and Yackety Yack photo shoots are not the issues which send our political hearts a umpety-thumping.

But this year is different. Because Nick nston and Mark Marin are different For Nick and Mark, it's not about seeing their names emblazoned in Carolina blue on every mailing you get between now and senility. It's not about some burning ambion to pad that grad school application.

Nick and Mark have been making a difference at Carolina for years. And that's not something which leaps to mind when we think about senior class government. When students were pushing for a sane chancellor selection committee, Nick was a leader. And Nick put in a whole lot of hours this semester creating Students for Children, a children's advocacy group. Mark's sincere work in Jim Copland's administration and with the attorney general's staff proves he's determined and dedicated. That's the kind of energy which makes this year's senior class election mean more than just a popularity contest. Most years, that's what senior class is about. But when youlook at Nick Johnston and Mark Marin, when you look at their solid experience and their creative platform, then you realize that this is an election that matters.

They've earned my respect, and your vote. Nick and Mark are about more than a cute Scottish accent, a firm handshake. and polished white-boy charm. They're about a senior class office that makes a difference. Finally.

> Joan Petit SENIOR ENGLISH AND WOMEN'S STUDIES

Kenefick/Hahn Have Done Homework for Class of '96

TO THE EDITOR:

I have worked closely with Brett Kenefick and Nancy Hahn on their cam-paign and have witnessed a level of integ-rity and dedication that would greatly benefit the senior class. I am extremely impressed with their consistent effort to gather as much information about this position as . They have talked with the development office, career services, the General Alumni Association, scholarship and fi-nancial aid office, and Dean Schroeder. Also, they have spoken extensively with the current senior class officers. Brett and Nancy have a realistic idea of what the senior class needs and of what can be accomplished through this position. I am confident that they will accomplish their campaign goals. More importantly, those goals have not resulted from the efforts of just two individuals. Rather, Brett and Nancy have recruited a large and diverse group of individuals to work on the campaign. We were all brought together to actively contribute our opinions and ideas to the platform. Brett and Nancy have sincerely listened to these various ideas and then enthusiastically incorporated them into their platform. Such openmindedness and persistent pursuit of input from all facets of the senior class are evident in the platform goals: commitment to gathering a group of marshals that reflects the diversity of the senior class, giving seniors a voice in the selection of their class gift and Commencement speaker, leaving seniors the opportunity to contribute to another department should the senior class gift not appeal to you, etc. Clearly, Brett and Nancy have the open-mindedness that is crucial for effective representation of the class of 1996. Thus, Brett and Nancy have the preparation, knowledge, and qualities that we all seek in a candidate. I endorse Brett Kenefick and Nancy Hahn for senior class president and vice president, and I strongly encourage all juniors to vote for them on Tuesday.

Seow/Jenkins Dedicated To Enjoyable Senior Year

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to ask the rising seniors to vote for Sue Seow and Adam Jenkins for senior class president and vice president. I have known Sue for almost two with great enthusiasm and confidence that she can do the job well When she first told me that she war first thing I noticed was her determination, knowledge, and capability to do the job and do it well. I also realized that she was willing to put her heart into it and sacrifice her last year here to make yours as special and rewarding as it should be. First of all, Sue does not want to be just token officer who only chooses the speaker at your graduation and the senior class gift (to which you contribute). She wants to expand the role of the senior class presi dent to help the seniors in any possible way. Sue wants to make sure that you, the rising seniors, are well provided for in this last (and extremely important) year here. From revamping the advising system to better inform the seniors of requirements to having Senior Fiesta Nights, one can see that Sue and Adam are trying to make a true difference. Put simply, Sue and Adam want to make your last year here as enjoyable and memorable as it can be with the least amount of worry about what is going to happen to you once you graduate.

I strongly urge the rising seniors to vote for Sue Seow and Adam Jenkins. Sue is dedicated to this project and has chosen to make it her sole focus for the year. Therefore she will do a good job of serving the senior class. She wants to make this your senior year rather than just one or two helter-skelter senior weeks. Sue is honest, dependable, and hard working. She is also responsive to any new ideas that may come along. She is not politically connected to any organization on campus, so the se-niors will get an apolitical president who gets the job done, on time and correctly. She is not making any far-fetched promises that seem too good to be true; she is, however, making a promise to serve the senior class. Sue and Adam are sacrificing their last year here to make it more enjoy able for you, the rising seniors. I ask you to sacrifice five minutes of your time on Tuesday, Feb. 14, 1995, and vote for Sue Seow

Rebecca De Haas

Woody/Dolby Give Seniors A Chance to Be involved

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to give my enthusiastic endorsement to Thad Woody and Terius Dolby for the offices of senior class president and vice president. I firmly believe that the ideas in the Woody & Dolby for Senior Class platform are clearly the most revolutionary and beneficial presented this year. Thad and Terius have devoted themyear. I nad and I errus have devoted them-selves fully to developing ideas which will have both long, and short-term benefits for the Senior Class, and their commitment to the Senior Class would never waver if elected. Innovative ideas such as having TWO SENIOR WEEKS, using the Internet to help Seniors search for jobs and transmit applications to potential e ers, publishing an easily accessible Senior Calendar, and creating an endowment which would provide for seniors to serve their community are exemplary of the vision encompassed by the Woody & Dolby platform. I feel the most important thing about Thad & Terius is that they are more than just passively open to the ideas of others. They actively seek advice and opin-ions from anyone willing to offer them. Their desire to involve others in a unified Senior Class is reflected in their plan to allow each campus organization, fraternity, and sorority to nominate a Senior Class Marshal. Also, they are planning to connect the Senior Class through the Internet and to encourage Seniors to offer suggestions for both the Senior Class Gift and the fall and spring Commencement speakers over e-mail. I want to close by asking that you remember Thad Woody & Terius Dolby when you cast your vote for senior class president and vice president. Their own words best exemplify why they deserve your vote. In their platform, they wrote the following: "As Seniors it is our responsibility to leave the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill better than we found it." This philosophy strikes at the heart of why Senior Class officers are elected and epitomizes why Thad Woody & Terius Dolby should be the next president and vice president of the Senior Class.

> Rasheed Wallace SOPHOMORE UNDECIDED

Galbo's Experience Makes Him Ready to Lead CAA

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to dorse Wes Galbo for Carolina Athletic Association president. As a former CAA president, I recognize and appreciate Wes' dedication to achievement. Wes represents a willingness to go above and beyond the Wes has served as treasurer for CAA for the past year. In that single year in the CAA Cabinet he has been active in all aspects. He has assisted with Homecoming events, the Tar Heel Tip-Off, ticket distributions, and many Olympic sport contests. Along with these CAA-specific experiences Wes has held other positions around campus such as a member of the DTH Board of Directors and Honors Program Student Advisory Board. These varied experiences will prove extremely value able in the position of president. Wes has many ideas that will prove beneficial to the entire student body. He has begun the process of bringing CAA "on-line" and has taken the steps necessary to make electronic mail communications a reality. He plans to hold forums in order to hear the plans to hold forums in order to hear the many opinions concerning the Homecom-ing process and work toward establishing a satellite South Campus Fitness Center. And as far as tickets are concerned, Wes prom-ises to listen to your opinions in the spring and will develop a fair and consistent policy. Experience, initiative, and the ability to follow through with fresh ideas are necess.

follow through with fresh ideas are neces-sary to be successful in this challenging position. Wes has these characteristics and would do a great job. Vote for Wes Galbo for Carolina Athletic Association presi-dent on Tuesday, Feb. 14.

Daniel T. Thornton GRADUATE STUDENT SPORTS ADMINISTRATION

'High Hopes' Key to Reid's Bid for CAA President

TO THE EDITOR:

'Just what makes that little ol' ant think he can move a rubber tree plant? Anyone knows an ant can't move a rubber tree plant! But he's got — high hopes ..." Well, the ant I want to tell you about isn't little. In fact, we call him "Big Ant Reid." He's also not trying to move a rubber tree; he's running for Carolina Athletic Association president. He does, however, have one thing in common with this ant — high hopes. Since freshman year, Anthony has been involved in CAA. Currently, he is Carolina Fever co-president and a member Carolina Fever co-president and a member of the CAA Cabinet. As Campus Y committee coordinator, I have supervised Anthony's work as co-chairman of Dillon Anthony's work as co-charman of Dillon School and can professionally say that he is second to none in implementing new programs and having a clear vision of what he wants to accomplish. He has tripled the size of the committee, has the largest percentage of dues-paying members, and has thoroughly educated the volunteers about the issues which effect Dillon School. the issues which effect Dillon School Working with Anthony in a professional environment has shown me that he has the environment has shown me that he has the organizational skills and resources needed to be an effective CAA president. Personally, Big Ant Reid is responsible, honest, and real. He is the only African American running for a presidential posi-tion in the campus elections. School spirit is important to Anthony, which shows in his dedication to CAA's Carolina Fever. At football games, Anthony is the loudest, strongest supporter of the team. Though Kenan Stadium holds more than 50,000 people, one can always pick Anthony out in the crowd. Finally, Anthony Reid has high, yet realistic, hopes for CAA. Using the knowledge of the policies and proce-dures of CAA which he has learned during his three-year involvement with the group, he would like to increase awareness of what the group does and how students can get involved. If elected, he would work to increase support of Carolina's Olympic sports, restructure Homecoming, and in-crease student/student-athlete interaction through service. What Anthony Reid has done in his three years at Carolina, who he is personally, and where he wants to take Carolina Athletic Association confirm that Anthony Reid is the best choice for president. So ... "Oops, there goes another rubber tree. Oops, there goes another rubber tree. Oops, there goes another rubber tree. Oops, there goes another rubber tree slout." tree plant.

Katie Rossin

At Helm of RHA, Godwin Would Listen to Residents

TO THE EDITOR:

My experience working with Jessica spans over three years. I am writing to endorse her campaign 101 percent. I feel I can knowledgeably recommend Jessica for the office of RHA president, because I worked very closely with the RHA presidents the past year and a half. Jessica was president of Cohb Residence Hall when I president of Cobb Residence Hall when I president of Cobb Residence Hall when I began to work with her in RHA. As gover-nor, I saw her ability to encourage others to become involved and to have fun being involved in RHA. She created feasible goals and took the necessary steps to accomplish them. This tradition continued as she, in turn, was elected governor of COJO (Cobb and Joyner area). Not only must an organization's president have innovative ideas, but he/she must also possess the qualities to encourage others to join in his/her efforts to get the job done. Jessica's platform is feasible. I am particularly impressed with her continued interest in the University's participation in state, regional and national residence hall associations. It has been over a decade since UNC was hall associations. There was a need for the creation of the new RA liaison position BEFORE the issue was addressed because the interaction of RAs and RHA leaders could be beneficial to both groups but particularly the residents — the group we both serve. This is an excellent step towards improving the relations between RHA and Housing. Hopefully, residents will have Housing. Hopefully, residents will have the chance to participate in an anonymous survey as Jessica has proposed. Residents could inform their governing body of concerns and programming ideas without the pressures of identification or going out of their way to come by the office to input their ideas. All residents care, someone just needs to go to them for their ideas—that individual will be Jessica. For the "together" choice that will accomplish what "together" choice that will accomplish what the majority of residents' needs indicate, for the choice that will listen to you, and for the choice that will give you what you vote for, VOTE Jessica Godwin for RHA president. You can make a choice neglect to vote for someone

> Brooke Venable ECONOMICS AND PSYCHOLOGY