UNC Netter Morrow Wins Sportsmanship Award

Brint Morrow, a junior member of UNC's 21st-ranked men's tennis team, won the Big 10 Tire/Blue-Gray Classic Sportsmanship award after sweeping three opponents at last weekend's Blue-Gray Classic in Montgomery, Ala.

Morrow, playing at No. 2 singles for the Tar Heels, defeated Jason Appel of Florida, John Costanzo of Michigan and Ali Hamadeh of Ole Miss in the three-day event. Morrow is ranked 81st in the Intercollegiate Tennis Association national rankings.

Morrow cramped up during the Michigan match and had to be taken to the hospital and given intravenous treatment, head coach Sam Paul said.

Player Hurt, QB Changes To DB in Spring Football

Freshman wide receiver L.C. Stevens will miss the remainder of spring football practice after suffering a dislocated collar bone in a non-contact drill last Thursday, North Carolina head coach Mack Brown said.

Also on Thursday, freshman Chuckie Parquet decided to switch from quarterback to defensive back.

On Friday, the Tar Heels completed a half-practice and then scrimmaged for the first time since spring drills started. Brown said the defense was ahead of the offense, but the practice enabled him to get a look at some younger players.

Spring practice resumed Tuesday.

Head softball coach Donna Papa is breathing a small sigh of relief as her team hits the road for UNC-Charlotte today. Despite the traditional preference in athletics for home games, the UNC softball team just can't seem to shake its recent bad luck at Finley Field.

The Tar Heels lost two ACC games on home territory to Georgia Tech Tuesday. The Yellow Jackets shut them out 8-0 in the first game and managed to hold onto a one-run lead to win the second game 3-2. The losses were UNC's fourth straight at Finley Field.

"We have not played well at home, and that's very unusual in comparison to past teams," Papa said. "Right now we're playing better on the road. I don't know what it is."

In game one, Georgia Tech (7-7) scored four runs in both the fourth and the sixth innings.

"The first game, we made mistakes that hurt us. Our defense was not good," Papa said.

Still, UNC managed seven hits in that game, compared to just two in the second.

"In the second game we got two hits. You don't win a game getting two hits. And I think that's the first time we've been in that situation, where we didn't hit the ball," Papa said.

Georgia Tech doubled the Tar Heels' total hits for the day, getting 18 compared to UNC's nine.

The second game looked promising for UNC when the Tar Heels jumped to an early 2-0 lead. The two runs came in the first inning, and the team's defense was tight.

But in the third inning, Georgia Tech's Laura Williams, the smallest player on the Yellow Jacket roster and possessor of the nickname "half-pint," stepped up to the plate and drove a deep line-drive over UNC rightfielder Arthur. The result was an inside-the-park home run and another run batted in.

"Laura was ACC Rookie of the Year last year," said Regina Tomaselli, Tech head coach. "She's really deceptive because she is the smallest on our team. I was quite surprised she was able to get a home run because the fence is so close here, but she's got blinding speed."

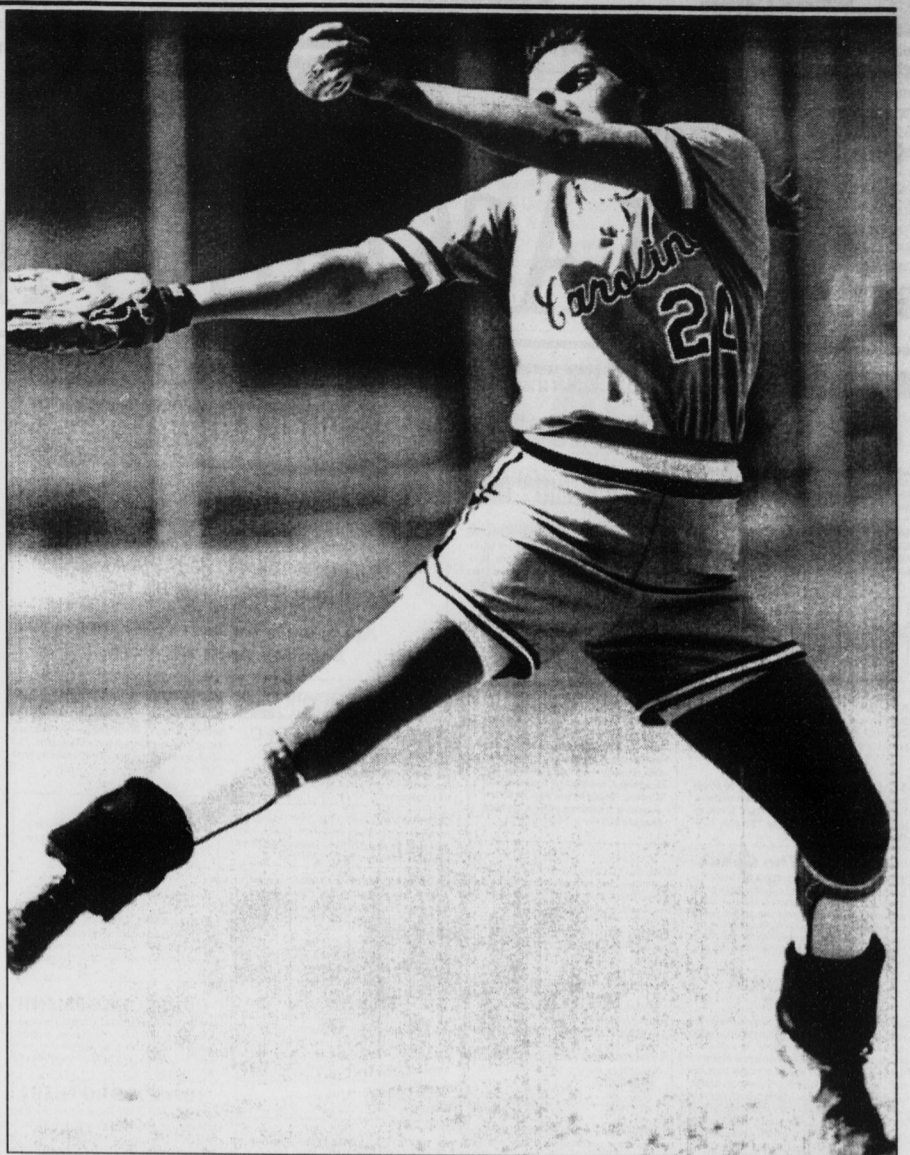

The Yellow Jackets got another run in the fifth inning to make the score 3-2, and from there UNC just couldn't get another hit to even things up.

Freshman Erin Ryan chalked up the win, and UNC junior Angie Gill got the loss.

Tomaselli was happy with her team's performance.

"I'm ecstatic," she said. "We really haven't been playing well, but today we brought our whole package. We brought key hitting, tight defense, and good pitching."

"It's nice to come up here against a good Carolina team and against a very good coaching staff and take two."

North Carolina pitcher Brandy Arthur got the loss in the first game in Tuesday's doubleheader vs. Georgia Tech.

Boston Globe: Lewis Did Coke With Bias

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BOSTON — The Reggie Lewis story took another twist Tuesday, with a report that the former Celtics captain once did cocaine with Len Bias — an All-American who died of an overdose.

A roommate of Lewis was quick to deny the report. The Boston Globe reported Tuesday that Derrick Lewis, a friend and college teammate of Bias, used cocaine with Reggie Lewis and Bias in 1985.

Reggie Lewis died three months after collapsing in a game. The cause of death was listed as an irregular heartbeat caused by the common-cold virus. The Wall Street Journal said cocaine wasn't adequately investigated as a cause of Lewis' collapse.
