

DTH Picks of the Week

It must have been the haircut. Justin "The Kid" Scheef hasn't had the greatest picking year, and it gotten even worse — right around the time that his hair hit the floor, his picks hit rock bottom. He's now floundering below the Mendoza line. Maybe Gianni can help. No, he's not the singer, but he is Scheef's idol ... and a former DTH picker. Maybe he can now dig the guest picker column out of the dungeon. On the strength of their shower bonding, Joe "Victoria's Secret" Rolison and Alec "I love my pinky ring" Morrison have established midseason prowess.

UNC Runners Favored at State Championship

BY ERIN PARRISH
STAFF WRITER

Just like the Simon and Garfunkel song, North Carolina men's cross country captain Brian Calloway is "Homeward Bound." Calloway heads back home to Charlotte's McAlpine Park Saturday, hoping to wrestle the state championship from defending champion Brevard.

"We're looking forward to coming into the state meet as favorites with our North Carolina contingent," Calloway said.

North Carolina is not a national high school powerhouse when it comes to cross country, and the men who compete for UNC were not heavily recruited by other schools. So it is remarkable that head coach Joan Nesbit's 1995 squad consists almost entirely of in-state products. The team has turned it into a source of pride.

"It's great to represent the University of North Carolina with a group consisting entirely of native Tar Heels," said Dave Mabe, the team's No. 1 runner going into Saturday's meet.

McAlpine Park is the one place in North Carolina known for its cross country connection. This site of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association State Championships and the Wendy's High School Invitational, McAlpine is not a new course for any of the top seven men.

"They tend to look at it almost like a home meet for them," UNC assistant coach Steve Brody said.

The UNC men finished second at the Auburn Invitational Sept. 30. There, UNC beat state contender Brevard.

The men have run in the shadow of the women for the last two years, but this season they are becoming a conference power. Still, Nesbit is cautious.

KAREN GODLOCK is the defending state and ACC cross country champion.

"While the men are favorites, we can't be overconfident," she said. "Brevard is always strong, and they'll be looking for revenge after losing to us at Auburn two weeks ago. And Duke has added some good freshmen to their team this year."

The Old North State connection extends to the women's team as well. Karen Godlock, the defending state and ACC champion and the top runner for the women, knows McAlpine well — she set the state scholastic cross country record on it when she competed for Polk County High School. Godlock, coming off a second place finish last week, is poised to help UNC defend its state championship.

Winston-Salem's Blake Phillips, Holly Marquette from Rocky Mount and Jennifer Strange from Rural Hall round out the other members of UNC's travelling squad who hail from North Carolina.

"We're looking forward to running on a course that so many of us ran in high

4 Basketball Teams to Play in First Jimmy V Classic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kansas, Temple, Massachusetts and Georgia Tech will play at the Meadowlands Arena on Dec. 22 in the Jimmy V Classic, a benefit to raise money for cancer research. Kansas will play Temple in the first game at 7 p.m. and UMass and Georgia Tech will meet in the second game.

Proceeds will benefit The V Foundation, a North Carolina organization founded by the late Jim Valvano. The former North Carolina State coach, who guided the Wolfpack to a national championship in 1983, died of cancer in 1993 at age 47.

"Jimmy was a close friend and competitor," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said in a conference call. "I coached against him in his last game in the ACC tournament. He was a great coach, motivator and one of the funniest guys you would ever want to be around. He was unique. I think they should have an ACC school in it every year."
