

Muster Seizes No. 1 Ranking Because of Scheduling Quirk

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
ATLANTA — The mysterious ATP computer is spitting out numbers that say Thomas Muster is the best tennis player in the world. To the man he knocked from the No. 1 spot, that just shows the absurdity of the current ratings system.
 "It certainly reflects the fact that you can dominate on one surface and play enough tennis to mislead a lot of people," Andre Agassi said after beating Pete Sampras in an exhibition Saturday night at the Omni.
 Muster, the Austrian clay-court specialist, will become No. 1 when the new ATP ratings are released Feb. 12. Agassi will drop to third, while Sampras moves into the No. 2 slot.
 Muster won 12 tournaments last year, including the French Open, but all but one of his victories were on clay.
 "I feel like he loses to Becker every time on any surface besides clay," Agassi said. "He loses to Pete every time on any surface besides clay. He loses to Courier on every other surface besides clay, and maybe even on clay."

 "It doesn't undermine the fact that he had to work his butt off for a year to get there on the rankings sheet. But it doesn't change the fact that I don't put him in the top 10 when it comes to surfaces outside of clay."
 Agassi, who lost in the semifinals of the Australian Open, will give up the No. 1 ranking because of a quirk in the schedule. An obscure, year-old tournament in San Jose, Calif., is being played a week later this year, costing Agassi 204 points.
 Got that? Most people don't.
 "It's so confusing," said Sampras, who was No. 1 before his third-round upset in Australia at the hands of 19-year-old Mark Philippoussis.

Senior Alison Nemeth swims the butterfly at the ACC Women's Championships this weekend at Koury Natatorium. The Tar Heels garnered their sixth straight title, winning 11 out of 20 events.

 "I think it's really a credit to the coaches, especially Frank (Comfort)," she said. "I think a lot of it goes to his attitude. His philosophy is that he recruits really good people that happen to swim fast. I think that's what you need for a good team. As long as they're a cohesive bunch and they're willing to work together, that provides for the spirit base, and the rest just follows. I think that tonight was a prime example of that."
 Comfort said he couldn't dwell on the fact that he is losing his seniors.
 "Everything moves in a four-year cycle," Comfort said. "I've been doing this for a long time, so I've gotten used to it."
 "We've got two outstanding divers and three outstanding swimmers. Everyone of them is a great person as well as a great diver or a great swimmer, and you're always going to miss great people."
 While the season is now officially over, many of UNC's swimmers still have the NCAAs to look forward to.
 "I'm psyched," Barrett said. "For me to go that fast here at ACCs feels real good."
