

Iowa's Kingsbury Suspended After Unsportsmanlike Play

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
IOWA CITY, Iowa — Iowa's Chris Kingsbury, the school record-holder for 3-pointers, was suspended Tuesday for the next three games because of unsportsmanlike behavior in Iowa's loss to Penn State last weekend.

Kingsbury was suspended for an incident after a second-half play in which he bumped into Penn State guard Dan Earl and then threw an elbow at the back of Earl's head as the Nittany Lions guard was bringing the ball upcourt.

"We felt something had to be done," university spokeswoman Ann Rhodes said.

The Big Ten office in Park Ridge, Ill., said in a statement it has publicly reprimanded Kingsbury for "striking... a player" during Penn State's 95-87 overtime victory.

The suspension, the third one in two seasons for the 6-foot-5 junior from Hamilton, Ohio, means Kingsbury will miss today's game at Northwestern.

He will also miss Sunday's game against visiting Indiana and the contest at Michigan on Tuesday.

"Chris' behavior has been inappropriate at times and this suspension is intended to send the message that we expect the highest standards of conduct from our student-athletes both on and off the playing surfaces," men's athletic director Bob Bowlsby said in a statement.

Kingsbury served a one-game suspension last season for unsportsmanlike conduct against Indiana on March 12.

That penalty included a private reprimand and the suspension was served at the same time as a suspension he received for pleading guilty last Nov. 10 to a charge of public intoxication.

A few months earlier, in the summer, Kingsbury also pleaded guilty and paid a fine on a trespassing charge in which he and some friends took a late-night swim at an Iowa City apartment complex swimming pool.

Educational Foundation, Inc. cancelled its free membership sign up Feb. 3 due to the weather. It will be rescheduled for March 13 at Senior Info Day in the Great Hall.
