Nore said.
The candidates have been working all week to point out differences in their platforms that could sway votes.
Nore said the idea for the establishment of an advisory board would show students he would be accountable for his actions.
"I would be giving face-to-face accountability to students, as well as faculty and staff," Nore said.
Walsh said his experience as treasurer for the CAA this year would make him uniquely qualified for the presidency.
"I'm the most experienced candidate," he said. "My platform has specific and attainable goals."
The Student Code does not specifically address what would happen if Nore and Walsh tied again, but another run-off would Bruce have experience that sets them apart. Robbins serves as the president of the Black Student Movement and is a member of the Undergraduate Student Court. His term as president of the BSM ends at the end of the month. Bruce, a biology major from Greenville, S.C., is the Standards Chairwoman for Alpha Delta Pi.

"Amelia and I have been heavily involved in government," Robbins said. "Our experience has introduced us to a lot of administrators which will help us to be more effective."
McNerney, a political science and religious studies major from McLean, Va., said the ideas she and Mistry have devel-likely occur, said Elections Board Chairwoman Annie Stuart.

To prevent another tie and get students to the polls, the candidates have continued campaigning at full strength.
"We've been continuing to go door-to-door, we've been phonebanking, we'll be in the Pit until 3 p.m. today to make folks go to the polls," Nore said Monday.
Walsh said he had spent his week doing "the standard campaign stuff," such as talking to student groups.
Despite their best efforts, the number of students showing up at the polls is expected to drop, Stuart said. "Based on the attitudes last week, I don't expect there to be many people."
The tie has given the candidates the chance to show how important their vote is, Walsh said. "Seth's and my biggest tool in the (election) was an exact tie, and it stresses the importance of every vote."

oped are more important than experience.
McNerney is currently the vice president of Order of the Bell Tower and Mistry is a former justice on the Student Supreme Court and is on the Board of Founders for North Carolinians Against Gun Violence.
"Platform issues and leadership experience are important, but even more so, we present a vision to enhance the office," McNerney said.
McNerney said she and Mistry wanted the office of Senior Class president to take a more active role in government.
"Throughout our campaign, we have emphasized the importance of the Senior Class office taking its role to a more proactive level," McNerney said. "It's important that students realize the need for strong representation."

Black History Month Spotlight

Jean-Baptiste Point Du Sable
Jean-Baptiste Point Du Sable (7 - 1818) was a pioneer and entrepreneur. Sometime before 1773, Du Sable settled in what is today Chicago. In 1773 he purchased 30 acres of land, built a house with several rooms and lived in relative prosperity with his Indian wife and growing family. Du Sable participated briefly in the Revolutionary War, spying for the British. However, he was jailed by the English authorities for a few months because they thought his sympathies were "too French." In 1780 Du Sable served as a liaison officer between Indians of the Port Huron region and white officials, having been appointed to this post by the territorial governor, Patrick Sinclair, at the request of the Indians. Du Sable returned to Chicago in about 1782, where he became a fur trader and trading post owner.

As he prospered, he added 400 acres to his original tract, and his post grew to include a house (renowned for its elaborate furnishings and modern conveniences), two barns, a mill, a bakehouse, a poultry house and large livestock holdings. In 1800, for reasons still obscure, Du Sable sold the Chicago post for a total sum of $1,200 and moved to St. Charles, Mo. to live with one of his sons. He died a pauper in 1818.

MARKETING OPPORTUNITIES

CAPITAL ONE HAS REDEFINED AN INDUSTRY.

IMAGINE WHAT WE CAN DO FOR YOUR CAREER.

In the credit card industry, Capital One has rewritten the rule book. We took the market by storm through use of our proprietary Information Based Strategy (IBS) and have experienced a greater than 60% compounded annual earnings growth rate for the past three years.

Individualized marketing to a mass market turned traditional thinking upside-down. We do that a lot at Capital One.

MARKETING SPECIALIST

As a Marketing Specialist you will help implement direct mail marketing campaigns, playing a key role in creative/marketing strategy development and copywriting. Working closely with the creative team and senior product specialists, you will serve as liaison for the four major groups involved in our DM campaigns — business analysts, production, data processing and operations.

We require a Bachelor's degree, preferably in English, Marketing or Liberal Arts. You will also need excellent writing, organizational and analytical skills as well as a keen attention to detail. The ability to comprehend and communicate elements regarding business/economic strategy, print production constraints and operations to all levels is a must.

We're an organization that depends on the skills, talent and commitment of every person. It's a formula that has taken us a long way already. Join us for the challenges of the future. Please forward your resume to: Capital One, Carolyn Gibson, 11013 West Broad St., Attn: 12061-0430, Glen Allen, VA 23060. Fax: 804-967-7719.
