

Baseball Hammered By Camels

BY KURT TONDORF

Baseball isn't played on paper. That was the point Campbell carved into the Boshamer Stadium dirt following a 9-2 waxing of North Carolina before a crowd of 200 on Tuesday.

"Humility is sometimes a great teacher, and today we're certainly very humbled," UNC coach Mike Roberts said.

The Tar Heels (6-4) had it all in their corner: a freshman pitcher making his first collegiate start to knock around the park; a Fighting Camel offense that boasted only one hitter with a home run; and a 13-game win-streak against the Camels (2-4).

But none of that mattered. Campbell starting pitcher Ray Greene (1-0) overcame his pregame jitters to keep eager Tar Heel batters at bay. Greene lasted four and one-third innings, conceded one run on three hits and got the winning decision in his debut.

"We didn't tell him until we got off the bus that he was pitching today," Campbell coach Chip Smith said. "We might start to make a habit out of that."

So Greene made the most of his opportunity, while UNC failed to take advantage of Greene's inexperience.

"People will look at a baseball player and say if he's good or not very good, but you still have to play the game," Roberts said. "Our guys felt like they should be hitting (Greene). The only trouble is we didn't."

The Tar Heels entered Tuesday's game on a power trip, ringing up 11 homers during their first start to the season. But with two men on in the top of the fifth inning, it was Campbell's Scott Jackson who tapped a Josh Potter slider just over the left field wall for his first homer of the season, putting the Camels up 4-0.

After catcher Josh Rowell hit a fifth inning sacrifice fly to score Brian Whitlock, Roberts called on pinch-hitter Mike Stoner for an offensive boost. The senior delivered an opposite-field triple in the seventh — UNC's only extra-base hit of the game — and later scored on center fielder Jarrett Shearin's fly ball.

But the Tar Heel rally crumbled in the top of the eighth. The Camels capitalized on two UNC wild pitches, a passed ball and three walks to tack on four more runs and build an insurmountable 8-2 lead. An error by Whitlock in the ninth, his second of the day, allowed Campbell's Chris Saich to come home and complete the scoring.

Wake Buries UNC Behind Offensive Onslaught

WINSTON-SALEM — Despite its recent doldrums, North Carolina still held a chance to grab second place in the ACC. While losing four of seven games, the Tar Heels traveled to Wake Forest with second place on the line.

But those chances melted quickly, as the game's fate was sealed in one play.

Only 3:39 into the first half, Jeff McInnis fouled Tony Rutland as he drove to the hoop, and McInnis was hit with a technical for arguing the call.

Wake Forest (19-5, 11-4 in the ACC) converted three of the four free throws, and absolutely ran away from the Tar Heels from there, winning 84-60 in front of 14,406 at Lawrence Joel Memorial Coliseum.

"That's just Coach Smith," McInnis said. "You get the (technical foul), you're going to sit. But I didn't think it'd be for that long."

The loss was the worst since North Carolina (19-9, 9-6) lost to Wake Forest 88-62 in 1993, and it kept the Tar Heels from continuing their 25 year streak of 20-plus wins. When McInnis went to the pine, he took with him the ability to run the team. As McInnis sat for the next eight minutes, the Tar Heels managed only nine points, looking ever so lost in the offensive set.

Wake turned the 9-7 early lead and leapt to a 32-16 lead before McInnis returned.

"They played major minutes without Jeff McInnis," Odom said. "He's only one of the five or six best players in the conference, and that has to be unsettling for a team."

The Tar Heels missed eight shots during McInnis stretch on the bench, and turned the ball over three times.

But even when McInnis returned, Wake had the answer.

The Deacs camped out behind the arc and drilled eight first-half 3s en route to a 52-28 halftime lead, equaling the most points UNC has given up in a half this season.

Wake's duo of Tony Rutland and Jerry Braswell combined to hit seven 3-pointers in the first half.

And Rutland broke the Tar Heels back when he nailed a 3-pointer with three seconds left in the half, stole the inbound pass, and lofted a jumper from behind the backboard.

"You know that it's almost surreal," Odom said. "It's like what you're seeing is not really happening."

The Deacons shot 61.3 percent in the first half, the highest total against North Carolina this season for a half.

And while Braswell and Rutland rained

WINSTON-SALEM — Tony Rutland hasn't been too talkative the last few days.

Since his 1-of-9 performance against Virginia on Sunday, the normally outgoing Wake Forest guard has been a bit more introverted than usual.

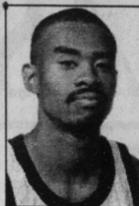

"We challenged him — he played poorly up at Virginia — I wasn't sure if I challenged him too much," Demon Deacon coach Dave Odom said.

"Obviously, I didn't."

Indeed, the 6-foot-2 sophomore jetted out of his mini-slump against UNC on Tuesday, hitting 5 of 11 from behind the arc to lead a Demon Deacon deluge that drowned the Tar Heels 84-60.

"It's just amazing, the shots they got and how they got them," UNC center Serge Zwicker said. "They seemed to hit everything. ... You can't expect to win with shots like that."

the beginning, connecting on two of Wake's first three shots — all of which were 3s — to begin a thunderstorm that never passed.

"They were taking their shots, and we just fell behind and could never get back," UNC guard Jeff McInnis said.

Senior Rusty LaRue and sophomore Jerry Braswell helped out a bit, combining for four more treys on 4-of-6 shooting from behind the arc in the first stanza, but the show belonged to Rutland.

As if to put a neon exclamation point on his brow-raising play, he calmly buried a triumvirate in the face of Shammond Williams with 3.2 seconds left in the half, then intercepted the inbound pass meant for Williams. As the horn sounded, he knocked down an over-the-backboard shot and took a 24-point lead into the locker room. "I don't think I've ever seen a ball get that high and then come down and swish," Zwicker said.

Rutland's scoring was more reticent in the second stanza, as he netted only five points, but the damage had already been done, because his teammates had taken to his example. Rutland buried one 3 in that stanza, but Wake added three more.

UNC simply couldn't seem to stop the storm — the Deacs easily swished their shots, whether there were Tar Heels in their faces or not.

"We shot the ball extremely well — extremely well — you look at yourself on nights like this and say you should be that good," Odom said.

Wake Odom finished the game with 12 treys, hitting 44.4 percent from behind the arc and almost 51 percent for the game.

McInnis said, "When a team's hitting like that, there's almost nothing you can do."

margin in the final five minutes, there would be no comeback.

The Deacons finished off their unbeaten home record this season by never allowing their lead to fall inside of 17 in the second half.

"We talked at halftime about the ingredients of a comeback," Odom said. "Not necessarily a North Carolina comeback, but the ingredients of a good comeback.

"We tried to address those in the second half, and we did a fairly good job of that."

And with 12:11 left, Tony Rutland ended any thoughts of a comeback, nailing a 3-pointer with the shot clock running down to push Wake's lead back to 22.

Eagles Eclipse Softball With Win, Tie

North Carolina's softball team had no difficulty getting its bats going in Tuesday's doubleheader against Eastern Michigan.

The problem was keeping them going.

The Tar Heels (7-3-1) managed to score three runs in the first inning of game one, only to go cold at the plate down the stretch and lose 8-3 to Eastern Michigan (4-2-1).

UNC repeated its first-inning success in game two, scoring four first-inning runs off Eagle pitcher Carrie Knight. But once again, the Tar Heels' bats cooled, and Eastern Michigan took a 7-4 lead in the top of the seventh inning.

But in the bottom of the seventh inning with one out, the umpires suddenly called the game because of darkness. The final score was based on the last complete inning of play, resulting in a 4-4 tie.

"That doesn't happen very often in baseball or softball," UNC coach Donna Papa said. "But when you're dealing with the early part of the season, you're dealing with darkness and trying to get the doubleheader in."

In the first game, the Tar Heels scored early on an RBI single by Christine Kubin. Sophomore Lorin Slade followed with a two-run double, knotting the score at 3-3 at the end of the first inning.

But the Eagles churned out one run in the third and three more in the fourth inning en route to the 8-3 victory. Sophomore pitcher Brandy Arthur (4-1) took her first loss of the season for the UNC.

In the second game, the Tar Heels took control with their four-run first inning, highlighted by pitcher Jen Klesaris' two-run homer. Klesaris also silenced EMU's bats in the early going, allowing only two hits through the first three innings.

Trailing 4-1 in the fifth inning, the Eagles found a solution to Klesaris' riddle and rattled the confident freshman for four hits and three runs.

"After the first five innings, hitters are able to time the pitchers," Papa said. "They get to know what the pitcher's throwing. It's a lot easier for a hitter at that point in time."

The Tar Heels had a chance to take the lead in the bottom of the sixth inning. Kubin and Klesaris were at first and third with only one out, but Knight managed to strike out the next two UNC batters to snuff out the Tar Heels' last shot at a victory.

"That's disappointing to have a 4-0 lead and let them come back," Papa said. "We had a chance to go up and probably win the game before darkness with runners at first and third. We just didn't get the timely hits when we needed them."

The game remained deadlocked at four until the top of the seventh inning. Eagle Kristie Berry nailed a Klesaris pitch into left center field to drive in Melissa Drouillard and Cyle Ruedisale, and EMU added another run to go up 7-4.

Once the controversial decision to call the game was made, EMU Coach Connie Miner stormed out of the dugout and argued against a decision which nullified the Eagles' seven-run comeback.

"I don't think we should have started that last inning," Papa said. "It's tough for Eastern Michigan because they made a great comeback and scored those runs and then not be able to finish those two outs."

Villanova Announces Circumstances Of Standout's Calling Card Violations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Villanova basketball star Kerry Kittles, suspended last week for using a university phone card, ran up $3,100 in unauthorized calls since 1994, school officials reported.

Villanova revealed for the first time the details of the incident that forced its All-American guard to the bench for the last three games of his senior season.

According to the report submitted to the NCAA, Kittles was given the card so he could phone a reporter for an interview while the team was in Anchorage for the Great Alaska Shootout in 1994.

Kittles returned the card, but kept a copy of the number and used it for personal calls while the team was on the road, said athletic director Gene DeFilippo.

The school's business office discovered the unauthorized use last week. By correlating the calls to the team's travel schedule, the office attributed charges to Kittles.

When asked about the calls, Kittles immediately admitted he'd been using the number. With the help of his family, he has repaid the money, DeFilippo said.

But the NCAA, which forbids special privileges to student athletes, hit Kittles with a three-game suspension that wiped out his chance to break the Villanova scoring record.
