Committee recommends transportation fee increase

The Chancellor's Committee on Student Fees discussed recommendations from the Student Fee Audit Committee regarding proposed fee increases Tuesday.

The recommendations concerned proposed increases in student transportation, athletic, education and technology fees and a newly proposed UNC ONE Card fee.

The SFAC supported an increase in the transportation fee but raised major concerns regarding the other three fee requests.

A memo submitted by the student body treasurer and SFAC chairwoman, Julie Gasperini, stated that the SFAC believed the transportation fee increase was justified since only students who would be receiving services during the summer would have to pay.

The committee disagreed with the creation of a new fee category for the ONE Card.

Carolyn Elfland, associate vice chancellor for business, said the segment of the ONE Card system needing fee support was the cost of activation and usage. "There's no money support of the interactive portion of the ONE Card system for the students," she said.

Katherine Kraft, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Federation and a member of the SFAC, said she disagreed with forcing all students to pay for a service not utilized by everyone. She gave the example of students in Health Affairs who had little use for their ONE Card.

"Charge the people who are using the services and benefitting from the services," Kraft said.

However, Student Body President Aaron Nelson disagreed, saying that the same ONE Card benefits are available to all students, some people just chose not to use them.

Students who deliberately chose not to attend athletic events or utilize other services still had to pay the required fees, he said.

The memo stated the SFAC realized the proposed increase was necessary because fees were not increased for food service improvements last spring.

"We felt this was a through-the-backdoor funding of food services," Gasperini said.

Another disputed increase was the $10 increase in athletic fees. The increase

Additional rabies cases reported

■ The cases, including two raccoons and a bat, bring the county's total to eight.

Orange County Animal Control officials confirmed Tuesday that three more cases of rabies had been found in the area. This brings the year-to-date total of rabies cases in the county to eight.

Orange County Animal Control Director John Sauls said two cases involved infected raccoons and the other an infected bat.

One raccoon was found on a driveway on Canter Drive, in the northeastern section of Orange County. Another raccoon was found on a driveway on N.C. Highway 57 north, near Pearson County. In both cases, the residents' dogs found the

Rabies Tips

To protect pets from rabies, Sandy Christiansen, general manager of the Animal Protection Society, said pets should be kept indoors at night. Some other tips she suggested are:

- Residents should not leave food outside that would attract raccoons.
- If you suspect an animal is rabid, you should call the Animal Control Department at 732-8182, ext. 2075, or 911 if it is after business hours.

and other terrestrial animals, the number of rabies cases in Orange County will continue to rise, Sauls said.

In an effort to make it easier for residents to have their pets vaccinated and to end the epidemic, the Orange County Animal Protection Society is sponsoring a reduced-cost vaccination clinic on Nov. 9 at the animal shelter on Airport Road, Sauls said.

However, after a pet has been vaccinated, the most important thing residents can do to stop the spread of the epidemic is to keep pets confined to their property and away from wildlife, Sauls said.

"Over the last several cases, these people are letting their dogs run loose," he said.

"I hope people will realize this is a real threat to their families."

University field expansion prompts council concern

The Chapel Hill Town Council voted 5-4 Monday to discourage the University from building athletic fields near the Mason Farm Biological Reserve.

The University has plans to renovate 18-hole Finley Golf Course and extend it by nine holes, displacing five athletic fields adjacent to the course. It plans to relocate the athletic fields and add two new fields to a site next to the reserve. The entire project would cost around $5.2 million dollars.

Council member Lee Pavao voted against the resolution and said he thought it was not within the council's jurisdiction.

"We don't have any authority over the University here," he said. "I don't think it called for a resolution."

Although council member Joe Capowski also voted against the resolution, he said the town still needed to think about the environment.

"I think we have to pay close attention to the environmental impact of those athletic fields," Capowski said.

Council member Julie Andreson, who voted in favor of the resolution, said she was concerned about the construction of the ball fields.

"I would hope the University would listen to their citizens," Andreson said. "I think the ball fields would degrade the area significantly."

Andreson said the University should think first about the environment.

"It seems like bad planning, and frankly I don't think this serves the mission of the University," she said.

UNC Associate Vice Chancellor for Facilities Bruce Runberg said he felt the project was still viable after all the feedback he received.

"Generally, these people were concerned about the impact on the environment," Runberg said. "We'll be adding more buffer from the stream to isolate

The Sierra Club formally announced Tuesday its endorsement of Democratic contenders Eleanor Kinnaird and Howard Lee and incumbent Joe Hackney, D-Orange, in the Nov. 5 General Assembly elections.

Sierra Club spokeswoman Trish Rafalow said the club supports Kinnaird and Lee in the 16th District state Senate race based on their history of supporting environmental concerns.

Kinnaird, the former mayor of Carrboro, was instrumental in enacting a series of measures to protect the University Lake Watershed, Rafalow said.

"They've both shown a great deal of leadership in environmental issues," she said.

They face incumbent Republican Teena Little, R-Moore, and Republican

P.H. Craig, a Chapel Hill resident. Kinnaird said she was grateful to have the club's support.

"The Sierra Club is part of our team to help us work for the best protection of our natural resources," Kinnaird said. "I think the Sierra Club endorsement is very, very important."

Leaders of the Sierra Club said they supported Lee's work in public transportation.

"A balanced approach to transportation is an important item," Lee said.

The Sierra Club said it shared Lee's interest in protecting the state's waters. Lee, formerly a state senator and mayor of Chapel Hill, said he would support a fund to clean up the state's rivers and streams.

Lee said the Sierra Club was a powerful organization and he was glad to
