

Women's soccer to face balanced Terp attack

Laurie Schwoy hopes to continue her impressive play today as the No. 2 UNC women's soccer team (15-1) square off against No. 11 Maryland at 3 p.m. at Fetzer Field.

If the Terrapins hope to stay close in the game, its defense will have to stop UNC's potent offense. Schwoy, the ACC Player of the Week, has been on a roll, scoring three goals (including two game-winners) last weekend in the Wisconsin Soccer Invitational.

UNC coach Anson Dorrance moved Schwoy to the midfield and switched Cindy Parlow to forward, and the swap has resulted in Schwoy's improved play.

"Schwoy has a phenomenal work-rate and is so good in the air that putting her in this position is just highlighting all of her strengths," Dorrance said. "She leads the team in assists and is becoming a well-rounded, outstanding contributor for us in all areas."

Not only has Schwoy benefited from the position switch, Parlow has stepped her game up as well.

"Cindy much prefers to play on the forward line, and she has demonstrated it by going after teams one-on-one," Dorrance said.

Maryland enters the match with a good blend of younger and veteran players. Last year the Terps had a tremendous recruiting year, and those players now have good experience under their belts.

The Terps are led by Keri Sarver (12 goals and 11 assists) and Emmy Harbo (15 goals, three assists). Meanwhile, Maryland keeper Missy Price has pitched eight shutouts this year.

"We appreciate the talent they have," Dorrance said. "They have a very talented forward line, so it's going to be a challenge for our defense to shut down their strikers."

Men's soccer looks to end late-game frustrations in Radford match

BY MIKE SUNDHEIM

After several disappointing outings, the North Carolina men's soccer team has a chance to get back on track tonight when it faces Radford (7-9-1) at 7 at Fetzer Field.

UNC (7-5-1) has not lost to Radford in four previous meetings and defeated the Highlanders 3-2 last year in Chapel Hill.

For the Tar Heels, who suffered a 3-2 overtime loss to sub-500 N.C. State on Saturday, the Radford game is another chance to try to fill in the holes that UNC's weaker opponents have been slipping through.

"It's going to take more concentration," UNC coach Elmar Bolowich said. "The shots are being taken, but they aren't always being taken with a purpose."

Radford, which finished 11-5-3 in 1995, lost four vital starters from last year's squad to graduation, including Big South Conference Player of the Year Ian Spooner. The Highlanders have had problems producing offensively and were shut out in six of their nine losses this season.

"You can't look at the statistics and say, 'This is what they've done, and this is what they haven't done,'" Bolowich said. "They are going to come in and play for a result."

Radford's leading scorer is Kevin Kelly, a freshman who has tallied seven goals. The Highlanders' starting goalkeeper is Sacha Drouin, the younger brother of UNC keeper Dimitry Drouin.

UNC's leading scorer, junior Carey Talley, will sit out tonight's game serving a mandatory one-game suspension after receiving his fifth yellow-card of the season Saturday against N.C. State.
