

Cunningham works out for Ditka, New Orleans

METAIRIE, La. Former Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham worked out Tuesday at the New Orleans Saints training facility.

Coach Mike Ditka has said he wants to create a more competitive environment for veteran starting quarterback Jim Everett.

Sources report Manning will stay at Tennessee

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Peyton Manning, by far the best pro prospect among college quarterbacks, is learning toward staying at Tennessee rather than entering the NFL draft.

Manning said Tuesday he will announce his decision Wednesday at a 1:30 p.m. EST news conference on the Tennessee campus.

Various sources, including agents and NFL officials, said Manning is likely to remain at Tennessee.

'I'd say it's 99 percent sure that he'll stay," said one source, who asked not to be identified, adding he had spoken with Manning on Monday night

Nike Inc. lists Champion in lawsuit about TV ad

PORTLAND, Ore. - Nike Inc. has filed a lawsuit against Champion Products Inc. alleging Gary Payton violated his contract by endorsing the rival company's athletic apparel.

Nike is seeking more than $225,000 from Champion and Payton's agent, Aaron K. Goodwin. The Beaverton athletic shoe and apparel company also is asking for a court order blocking Champion from airing two television ads featuring Payton. FROM WIRE REPORTS

UNC will send 18 fencers to Philadelphia for this weekend's competition.

BY JOHN SWEENEY STAFF WRITER

Amid all the hype surrounding this weekend's ACC Men's Basketball Tournament, it's easy for some of North Carolina's lesser-known sports to get lost in the crowd.

Yet the UNC fencing team will be heading out to begin its own bit of March Madness on Saturday — in this case, the Mid-Atlantic/South Regional Fencing Tournament. Eighteen Tar Heels (18-11 men, 23-7 women) were selected to compete in the tournament, with their bids for the NCAA championships on the line. "This is actually one of the smaller qualifying fields we've had," UNC coach Ron Miller said. "Part of that is due to injuries and to the fact that several of our best fencers didn't get enough bouts.

But that number is also a testament to the Tar Heels' depth. depth. fencers aren't in is based on perfor-mance during the regular season. Miller said a 60 percent win rate depending on one's competition.

plays a big role in determining whether a fencer proceeds to the NCAAs.

So the Tar Heels know they need to get their minds on the task at hand. Any slip-ups could end their season. "We've got to set everything else aside," junior Jason Wells said. "We can't be preoccupied with schoolwork and other things like that. We just have to focus on fencing because this is the do-or-die." Endurance will be another key for the

Fencers prepare for regional tournament

Tar Heels on Saturday. Each fencer could participate in more than 20 bouts this weekend. 'That's almost a third of the season in one day," Miller said. With that in mind, Miller will cut back on conditioning this week and focus instead on the mental aspects of fencing 'There's basically a lot more bouting, a lot more experimentation with tactics, trying to iron out the things that we're doing well this season," Miller said. "The last two weeks, we've tried to get back into the idea of fencing in a pool where there actually is elimination.

who has been to the tournament twice before, this weekend will mark her last opportunity to qualify for the NCAAs. Johnson has been putting plenty of emphasis on that bouting in hopes of improving her ability to deal with the pressure of the postseason.

"It's hard to go from fencing dual-meet format to fencing regional format," Johnson said. "You know you can travel all that distance and lose in the first round and be out.

Competition is fierce at the regional tournament, with the field narrowed to only the best fencers. But senior épéeist Lilian Kizer, who has advanced to the NCAAs the past two years, said even the strong qualifying field would be ben-eficial for the Tar Heels.

"It will be a higher level of competition, which is good, because that makes us perform better," Kizer said. In all, Miller predicted four to seven of his fencers would qualify. Wells, with a record of 64-15, promises to be one of the top Tar Heel performers, as does Kizer

"There's nobody there that I can't beat," Wells said.

In fact, that's pretty much how Miller feels about his entire team who, thanks to preparation and intensity, might be ready to surprise a few people. "Physically we're ready," Miller said. "We're in good shape, our injuries have improved, and I think mentally we're pretty well-balanced."

Packer to help Nebraska with conditioning, training

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LINCOLN, Neb. — Green Bay Packer Tyrone Williams, sentenced to six months in jail for firing two shots at an occupied car, will serve part of his time helping to condition athletes at the University of Nebraska.

Williams began serving time Feb. 24, a month after he played for the Packers in the Super Bowl, after pleading no contest and being convicted of thirddegree assault in the Jan. 30, 1994, shooting.

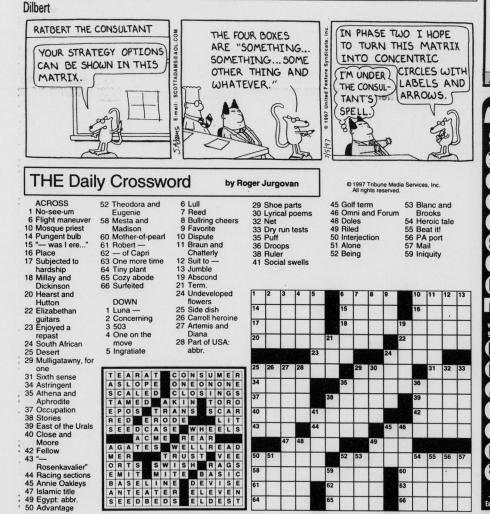

In the car were Kevin Porter, then a player for the New York Jets, and university student Brooke Bohac. The two shots hit the car's rear quarter panel. Connie Lofgren-Osborn of Lancaster County Corrections and Ron Flansburg of Lancaster County District Court Probation recommended denying Williams' request.

Lofgren-Osborn said her recommendation was "based on the nature and severity of the defendant's charge

But Lancaster County District Judge Bernard McGinn approved the work release plan on Friday, and Williams began work Monday.
