The Daily Tar Heel THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1997 Chapel Hill, North Ca 0 1997 DTH Publishing

ume 105, Issue 62

104 years of editorial freedom students and the Uni nmunity since 1893

UNC outreach gets massive HUD grant

The $400,000 will fund a partnership with Duke to aid a Durham community.

> BY WHITNEY MOORE STATE & NATIONAL EDITOR

UNC received hundreds of thou sands of federal dollars Wednesday to create a community outreach center in Durham

Durham. The $399,985 grant, part of $7.3 mil-lion handed out by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, will fund a unified effort between UNC and Duke University to help the southwest central area of Durham. The grant comes after three years of "This is our lucky year," said William Rohe, director of the Center for Urban & Regional Studies. "Last year we realized we needed to focus on one section of a city, instead of different areas of several cities.

'We chose southwest central We chose southwest central Durham because neighborhood groups had already come together on their own," he said. "We asked how we could help." Andrew Cuomo, secretary of HUD, said more than 100 universities applied for 16 grants worth approximately $400,000 each.

"We looked for universities located in the center of distressed communities," he said. "The principle at work here (is) to build bridges between universities and communities.

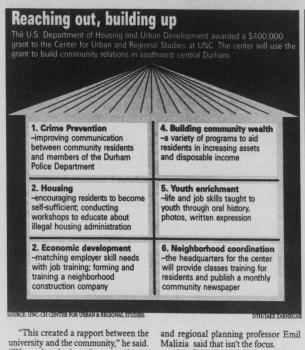

Rohe said many factors contributed to UNC's successful pursuit of the grant. "One reason is because we are collaborating with Duke on it," he said "That made a difference." The support of UNC Chancellor Michael Hooker also helped secure the prize, as did faculty contributions.

"(Hooker) wrote a tremendous letter on our behalf," Rohe said. "Plus, we had all of our faculty workers agree to donate half their time.

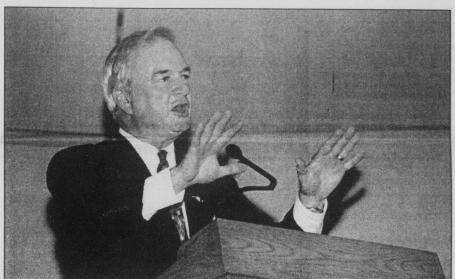

"(HUD) was very concerned that the ideas for the projects come from the community, not the university," Rohe said. "We did a lot of legwork to put together a proposal in which ideas real-ly did come from the community."

Ronnie McKoy, executive director of e West End Community Center in the southwest central Durham, said resi-dents responded to the uniqueness of the UNC group.

"This created a rapport between the university and the community," he said. "We tend to look at the university on one level and the people who live there on another. This gets rid of the myths and stereotypes so we build relationships.

Although faculty involved might benefit from research generated during the community outreach project, UNC city

Gov. Jim Hunt speaks to local health professionals about their accomplishments with the Area Health Education Centers (AHEC) Program on Wednesday night in Hill Hall. This year marks the 25th anniversary of AHEC

Hunt visits Chapel Hill to praise health care education endeavors

Area Health Education Centers celebrated its 25th anniversary Wednesday.

BY ANNE CORBETT STAFF WRITER

Gov. Jim Hunt praised the achieve-

Program offered Hunt the opportunity to honor AHEC's founders.

AHEC, established in 1972 to bring health care facilities to small communities around North Carolina, originated at the School of Medicine.

"It's good to be here to celebrate the 25th anniversary of AHEC," Hunt said. 'In fact, we don't celebrate enough good things that they have done.

"Our AHEC is one of the largest in the country and one of the most suc-cessful," he said. "We like to be first in North Carolina."

Hunt said his admiration for the AHEC program stemmed from earlier experiences when quality health care was not available. As a child his home-town often did not have a doctor.

When I was a little boy, we had a

Front-yard parking lots distressing to residents

BY AMY CAPPIELLO CITY EDITOR

Parking in Chapel Hill has been an issue for years as limited lots have forced students and commuters to search for other parking venues Some residents rent pieces of their yard as parking spaces But But these "front-yard park-ing lots" bother these residents in the Westside neighborhood. The neighborhood association pro-posed an ordinance to limit front-yard parking to the Chapel Hill Town Council ear-Chapel Hill Mayor ROSEMARY lier this year. WALDORF said she thought

The council will hold a public parking in front yards was an unsightly hearing on the proposal Sept. 15. problem

P a u l i n e Grimson, whose husband, Baird, is the president of the Westside Neighborhood Association, said the ordinance was proposed to protect the the neighborhood's appearance. "The reason we felt that we needed to do this is that the front yards are totally filled up with cars," she said. " Most other neighborhoods wouldn't

-

"Most other neighborhoods wouldn't allow this to happen." The proposed ordinance does not call for eliminating front-yard parking but for limiting it to 40 percent of the yard. Although many students utilize this type of parking, Grimson said the ordinance does not target students. "There are a lot of people who work for the University that also pay a fortune to park in front yards. An anti-student issue is not what we're proposing at all." Nevertheless, Chapel Hill Mayor Rosemary Waldorf said she believed students, who face tremendous parking problems, would be very interested in next week's public hearing. But she said the proposed ordinance was needed.

"I sympathize with people's trans-portation problems, but if you get a neighborhood, and every front yard is turned into a parking lot for three, four, five or six cars, it really becomes a nuisance

Student Body President Mo Nathan said he believed it was not up to the Said the believed it was not up to the top to Town to limit front-yard parking. "It's not the Town's land," he said. "It's the students' property, the local residents' property. They should be able to deter-mine what happens on their property."

Residents support $61 million bond

The public had a chance to hear specifics about the Nov. 4 bond referendum.

BY BARRETT BREWER

"Our first priority is to do something sitive for the community," he said.

"From the North Carolina perspec-tive, the most important thing is that HUD has been funding these things for ears," said Malizia. "For the first time North Carolina has a seat at the table."

STAFF WRITER

More than 70 people, including the Orange County Commissioners, turned out Wednesday evening to discuss how they should market the $60.6 million bond issue to Orange County voters Nov. 4.

A group of Orange County staff and citizens met to discuss strategies for the 1997 bond referendum.

Orange County Manager John Link identified the bond referendum meeting as a chance to update the county for the prepared to enter the 21st century, to provide for the overcrowding of schools, to provide for the building of parks and to address affordable housing." The bond referendum proposes the allotment of $60.6 million into five different bonds for construction and renorerent bonds for construction and reno-vation of public facilities. The five bonds will affect affordable housing, public buildings, sanitary sewer systems, parks and recreation facilities and both Orange County and Chapel Hill-Carrboro City Schools. In the winter of 1997, the Capital Needs Tack Force accessed the pared for

Needs Task Force assessed the need for between $51.7 and $61.7 million to property tax increase of 3.85 cents per $100 of valued property phased in over several years, Link said.

bond education committee, said she was in support of the bonds and felt there "In the long run this is the cheapest way to pay for it." Orange County Commissioner Stephen Halkiotis spoke in favor of the would be little opposition Nov. 4.

"If the bond issue is voted down,

(renovations and construction) will still be done more slowly and over a longer length of time," Eidenier said.

bonds "I think it is a modest bond package to provide for a wonderful opportunity in five distinct areas," he said. "These are issues that deal with our quality of life which is what Orange County is all about. Bill Strom, bond education committee co-chairman, said he felt the county residents who attended the meeting sup-ported the referendum. "I think it is realexciting," he said. "Obviously there is lots of momentum and support for the bonds through the town and county." Halkiotis said he detected public concern. "I'm excited about the quality of people in this room. They are who work and care for their fellow people."

Drama on campus

The dramatic arts live and breathe on campus with a multitude of theater groups. Their performances both educate and entertain. Page 5

Betty Eidenier, co-chairwoman of the properly fund recommended renovation and construction projects. The proposed bonds will attempt to pay back the $60.6 million debt with a

Without the bonds, property tax would increase by 10 to 11 cents accord-ing to county officials, he said.

BRUSHING UP

"We are trying to get organized in terms of the five bonds," Link said. "All five bonds allow the county to be the county to be the clust century, to ofessionals at a ceremony on campus Wednesday night. The 25th anniversary celebration for Health Education Centers

AHEC helped equalize health care across the country.

"The people of this state have had 25 years of good quality health care no matter who they are or where they live.

doctor but he got old and died, and w couldn't get another one," Hunt said. "I remember driving with my family to the

SEE HUNT, PAGE 2

Service hours may increase during holidays

BY ELLIE MCGINNESS STAFF WRITER

Students stuck on campus for long weekends and extended holidays can't always find food.

Student Congress wants to continue extending campus service hours during those holidays to accommodate the students remaining on campus

"Last year we started to extend the hours of the (South Campus) Mini Mart and other food services during all breaks so that students wouldn't go hungry during University holidays," said Scott Hammack, co-chairman of the student services committee.

extra

Co-chairman of the and sorority rush and other student student services SCOTT HAMMACK activities continuing during the nts to extend Labor Day holiservice hours.

day, there were many students still on campus. Ruth Justice, unit supervisor of Union Station, stressed the importance of extending hours of student services.

"It is very important for things to stay open for students during holidays because we do have so many exchange students and other students who stay on campus for these breaks," she said.

Justice also said she wouldn't have a problem finding staff to work during these holidays. She said plenty of people wanted to work Labor Day weekend.

"We were even over-staffed on

SEE SERVICES, PAGE 2

Becky Slattery (left), Elizabeth Lowry and Scott Oliver, slap new paint onto the cube outside the Student Union on Wednesday.

Who's who among colleges?

High school scholars request UNC sixth out of universities nationwide to be notified of Who's Who award winners. Page 2

Congress: no 'fresh-women'

Student Congress passed a resolution against the proposed "first-year students" title. Jane Brown and other professors are upset about the vote. Page low 70s Friday: Sunny; high 70s

One may have a blazing hearth in one's soul, and yet no one ever comes to sit by it. Vincent van Gogh