Court Might Drop Charges Against UNC Wrestler

UNC wrestler Chad Priest will appear in court Jan. 21 to face an additional charge of resisting arrest.

By KELLI BOUTIN

A UNC wrestler who was arrested after an Oct. 14 brawl at a fraternity party could have charges against him dropped if he pays a fine and attends alcohol awareness classes.

Chad David Priest, 21, of Spruce Pine, was charged with misdemeanor simple assault and resisting arrest after the fight, which occurred at the Phi Delta Theta fraternity house.

Don Dickerson, Priest's lawyer, said the simple assault charge was dropped Monday in Orange County District Court in Hillsborough after a meeting between the prosecution and the defense.

"The parties got together and talked and decided that the (simple assault) charge didn't need to be prosecuted," he said.

Priest, a walk-on for the Tar Heels, was suspended from the team for the remainder of the 1998-99 season in late October after Department of Athletics officials conducted an investigation into the matter.

Dickerson said the charge of resisting arrest would be dismissed under a deferred prosecution arrangement that stipulates that Priest must pay an $80 fine, attend alcohol awareness classes given by Student Health Service and stay out of trouble with the law.

Priest will appear in court again Dec. 21, when the decision will be made as to whether to drop the second charge.

UNC wrestling coach Bill Lam said despite the fact that the charges against Priest may be dropped, he did not regret his decision to suspend Priest.

"Even though it wasn't his fault the fight took place, he was still involved, he was still out after hours, he still resisted arrest," Lam said. "Being a walk-on or a recruited athlete, we don't want that type of behavior."

Two other wrestlers, senior David Flowers and redshirt freshman Steve Echeverri, were also suspended from the wrestling team for their involvement in the fight.

Dickerson said the facts surrounding the case were very complicated, and the deferred prosecution agreement was the most fair solution.

In October, Priest said the fight started when someone hit him and he fought back in defense. But fraternity members said the wrestlers started the fight.

Phi Delta Theta President Shoff Allison said in October that problems started when a group of wrestlers arrived at the fraternity's mixer party and got on stage with the band.

Dickerson said he was pleased with the results of Monday's hearing. "I think under the circumstances of the case that this was a reasonable way to resolve it."

Raleigh Police Charge 4 More In Davis' Death

RALEIGH — The mood at N.C. State University was somber Monday as students resumed classes and were forced to come to grips with the aftermath of Sunday's shooting death of an Neil Vernon Davis Jr., 21, of Fayetteville.

The N.C. State junior died Sunday morning at WakeMed as the result of a gunshot wound to the stomach during a struggle with an N.C. State wrestler, police said.

As the campus grieved, Raleigh police filed charges against four more people Monday in connection with the shooting death.

Rebecca Ann Geiger, 21; Jennifer Erin Sommer, 20; and Maggie Elaine Haney, 20, all members of the N.C. State gymnastics team, were charged with selling malt beverages to a person under 21 and selling malt beverage without a valid ABC permit, a press release from Raleigh police states.

The athletes charged Sunday were attending a party at the residence of Geiger, Sommer and Haney before the shooting incident.

Christopher Fay Green, 30, of Fayetteville, was also charged Monday with misdemeanor breaking and entering into Davis' residence.

"Everybody was just really shocked," said Rett Haigler, an N.C. State freshman from Winston-Salem. "The guy that got shot was known to be a nice guy and a good Sigma Chi brother, and with just one incident, he is gone."

The incident has left N.C. State with a mixture of emotions, said Tom Stafford, the school's vice chancellor for student affairs.

"There's been a lot of disbelief," he said. "Some anger — people are angry that people did what they did. There's a lot of sorrow. There's disappointment, too, that athletes would do something like this."

"We are all shocked and saddened by the loss of a great brother and a great friend."

Members of the Sigma Chi fraternity, of which Davis was a member, made a brief public statement Monday expressing their sympathies to Davis' friends and family.

"We are all shocked and saddened by the loss of a great brother and a great friend," said Ryan Ciccone, fraternity president and a senior at N.C. State.

"Love prevails over violence."

These four words were the only ones Dorothy Davis could muster Monday following the death of her son, Neil, near N.C. State University.

But the depth of those words epitomizes the desire of those who knew him best to preserve the memory of the young man whose future dreams were ended abruptly early Sunday morning.

"He really had in mind what he wanted to do," said Jenny Beaver, a UNC junior and Davis' former girlfriend. "He wanted to get out of school and start his own business."

Beaver, who dated Davis off and on from the fifth grade to the 11th grade, said she lost one of her dearest friends.

"Everyone has their first love, and he was mine," she said.

"Special friends are very hard to find, but he was, without a doubt, special. He was everything to me."

Neil Davis died Sunday morning from a gunshot wound.

Middle School in Fayetteville, remembered him fondly.

"Neil was a great kid who was full of life," he said. "He was a mischievous little thing when I coached him — not troublesome, but he just loved to have fun."

Buhrman remembered a story that he said epitomized Davis' character.

Davis was interested in a female basketball player in middle school and wanted to ask her to a dance, Buhrman said. But the object of his affection, cur-

Appointed Member Takes Board Oath

The Orange County Board of Education swore in its newest member Monday night amid no arguments despite recent conflicts surrounding the candidate's appointment.

Keith Cook took his oath of office at the board's meeting Monday, then immediately assumed his position on the board while other members and those attending applauded.

Conflict first surfaced at an Oct. 22 meeting when board member David Kolbinsky accused board Vice Chairwoman Susan Dovenbarger of rigging the appointment process.

Kolbinsky said Dovenbarger had promised Cook the empty board seat, which had been unexpectedly vacated by Larry Haverland in September for undisclosed reasons. "Keith entered knowing he would get it," Kolbinsky said at the Oct. 22 meeting. "A deal was made before he applied."

"If Mr. Cook had a decent bone in his body, he would withdraw (from the

Figures Show Rise in Blacks On Campus

The provost's office issued the report in response to the Black Student Movement's 22 demands.

By EMILY CRAMER
Staff Writer

A report issued by University officials indicates a rise in the number of black students on campus during the past four years, but some campus leaders say there is room for improvement.

The report was released Nov. 20 by the Office of the Provost in response to 22 demands the Black Student Movement presented to Chancellor Michael Hooker in 1997. The demands were designed by the BSM to improve black students' experience at UNC.

The report, which has results from fall 1997, shows that of the 24,189 students enrolled, 9.8 percent are black. Black undergraduates numbered 1,649 of 14,826 total undergraduate students in 1997. Of the 6,764 students enrolled in graduate school, the report indicated that a black graduate student population of 445 existed.

Some UNC officials say the results show improvement in the number of blacks at UNC, but some campus leaders say much more work needs to be done to achieve diversity.

BSM President Tamara Bailey said recruiting efforts played a big hand in the gradual increase in black students, yet the University needed to improve its methods of retaining them. "I think a lot of applause needs to be given to the efforts of minority recruitment," she said. "There needs to be a greater effort once they get here to make sure they stay here and graduate."

The report also showed an increase of 14 tenured and tenure-track black faculty since 1993, raising the number from 59 to 73.

Gerald Horne, director of the Institute of African-American Research, said the smaller numbers in the increase of black UNC faculty signalled a larger problem. "The lack of black faculty does not encourage confidence among the black population of this University," he
