Blue Devils Drill Ice-Cold UNC

By BRET STRELOW
Assistant Sports Editor

DURHAM — After holding Iowa State to its lowest shooting percentage of the season last Sunday, the North Carolina women's basketball team knew another strong defensive effort would be needed against No. 9 Duke.

But as Blue Devil fans yelled for "one more point" with less than a minute remaining, it was obvious that effort had not been duplicated.

Duke center Lello Gebisa got that last point — two of them actually — to propel the Blue Devils over the 100-point plateau in finishing off a 101-58 drubbing of UNC on Thursday night.

"I felt like every basket was going in," said Duke center Lauren Rice, who finished with 16 points and was one of five Blue Devils to reach double figures.

Duke (18-2, 7-1 in the ACC) stormed out of the gates, hitting 16 of its first 22 field goal attempts. By that point, the Blue Devils held a 36-12 lead with 6:46 left in the first half.

The Blue Devils shot a season-high 67 percent in the first 20 minutes to build a 30-point cushion. Duke tallied assists on 17 of its 22 field goals.

"We've been getting some good looks in the last few games, but we haven't been able to knock them down," Duke coach Gail Goetsenkos said. "We're an excellent shooting team, so sooner or later we're going to be able to have a good shooting night."

The Tar Heels (10-9, 2-6), on the other hand, were as ice cold as the roads leading to Cameron Indoor Stadium.

North Carolina, which suffered its worst loss since a 49-point defeat at Virginia on Feb. 14, 1990, missed 16 of its first 20 attempts from the field to dig itself into an insurmountable hole.

"Tonight, we tried to go inside some in the beginning," UNC coach Sylvia Hatchell said.

"We weren't making the shots. We're not physical inside. We're not drawing the fouls."
