College Students Local Create INTERNET AUCTION Sites

Spending hours putting up posters and fliers on campus just wasn't making it. Penn State students Ben Mandell, Nicole Wright, and Jim Szewc created a better way to buy and sell --TarheelsAuction.com, a free, local Internet auction site. In fact, they've started a company to create hundreds of these sites in universitytowns, VillageAuction.com.

Here's how it works. Log on to TarheelsAuction.com and register by typing in your name, a nickname, home address, and e-mail address. You'll see the agreement and be provided with a password. After that, you can buy and sell as often as you like, absolutely FREE.

Items are arranged in simple categories for buyers and sellers to use. In addition to new and used goods, the site can be used for rentals, professional services, roommates, jobs, swaps, and other categories. Sellers can set a starting sale price and a deadline for bids. The highest bid at the end of the auction period gets the goods.

One of the nice things about a local auction is that you can pick up or deliver your auctioned items locally. No shipping or waiting. You can see the buyer or seller face to face, paying locally and trading locally. The possibilities are greater, too. Try arranging a sublet or selling a used sofa on a national auction site!

There are opportunities for everyone at TarheelsAuction.com. Local businesses are encouraged to list items and become advertisers; and even charities can benefit. For each new registered user you sign-up for TarheelsAuction.com your charity can receive $1. Charitable auctions can also be arranged. Just email jszewc@villageauction.com.

The site will be monitored for legality and honesty in trading and advertising. Students and townspeople are encouraged to log on and try out this free auction Web site at TarheelsAuction.com. It's like we say "If you don't want it, somebody else does!"
