Tar Heels Adjust to New Format, Open Year With Win

By KELLY LUSK Staff Writer

The year 2000 might have brought a varied format to the tennis match between North Carolina and UNC-Greensboro, but the outcome remained the same as last year.

The Tar Heels shut out the Spartans 7-0 Wednesday night at Cone-Kenfield Tennis Center to open their Women's Tennis

UNC-G0 UNC7 This year, however, the order of events changed drastically. Instead of warming up with their opponents and then playing singles, the play ers opened the match with doubles, and the warmup was eliminated.

"I was nervous because I had to play doubles first, with no warmup, against a team that is a little more streaky," UNC senior Jessica Zaganczyk said.

If the adjustment was cause for the Tar Heels to lose one of three matches in the doubles round, they regained their rhythm when singles competition began. Zaganczyk, who played at No. 1 singles, bounced back from her doubles defeat to win her match against Jenny Gonzalez 6-1, 6-4. "Tonight was the best season opene

I've had in the four years I've played," Zaganczyk said. "It felt good." No. 2 seed Caroline Hill defeated Christine Weber 6-1, 6-1, and junior Courtney Zalinski racked up another UNC victory, playing at No. 3 against Michela Quinn.

Erin Niebling, Kristin Koenig and Kate Pinchbeck also won in singles.

"We definitely got stronger as the match went on," North Carolina coach Roland Thornqvist said. "During the last three-quarters, we were probably playing about as well as we can play. I was pleased with that." The Tar Heel players said they were happy with their opening performance.

Hill had been working on playing more aggressively, and said she felt good about her effort on the court.

"I saw improvement in every return-ing player," Thornqvist said. "No matter how things turn out scorewise, that's very important.'
