

Comeback Helps UNC Maintain Win Streak

By BRAD BROTHERS Staff Writer

With the North Carolina men's tennis team deadlocked with N.C. State at three matches apiece Tuesday, UNC's success or failure rested in the racket of one man.

Salmon 7-6, 6-2 to clinch a 4-3 victory for the Tar Heels at Cone-Kenfield Tennis Center.

"It's a good feeling to have, knowing that it all comes down to you," Cheatwood said. "I felt good in the second set.

The triumph was quite a turnaround for North Carolina (11-2, 3-0 in the ACC) from the early portion of the match, when it faced a one-point deficit after losing two of the three doubles matches.

As a result of its poor doubles play, UNC needed victories in four of the six singles matches to become victorious for the eighth time in as many matches.

Senior Tripp Phillips, who lost 8-2 in doubles with partner Ben Elia, through singles with a vengeance. He quickly disposed of N.C. State's Eric Jackson 6-2, 6-0.

"I was really upset with how I played in the doubles, and after that was over, I just tried to take some time and make sure I was a little more mentally prepared to play the singles," Phillips said.

Tar Heels Mario Petrone and Chad Riley completed their singles matches victoriously, defeating their opponents in straight sets. However, Assaf Drori and Trystan Meniane fell short in their respective matchups, making the score 3-3. That set the stage for Cheatwood to take the fortunes of the Tar Heels on his shoulders.

"I give our guys credit because we came back and did a good job in the singles, but they out-competed us in the doubles," UNC coach Sam Paul said.

Historically, North Carolina has devoured the Wolfpack like a late lunch. Entering the contest Tuesday, UNC had won 70 of 75 all-time meetings with N.C. State.

winning streak and their domination of the Wolfpack going.

"I have to give N.C. State a lot of credit," Paul said. "They came here to play; they've got a lot of seniors on that team and great leadership."

UNC now sets its sights on a home match with Virginia Commonwealth on April 1. "I think we will learn from today's match," Paul said. "We will get better from today's match."
