

Johns Hopkins Holds Off Men's Lacrosse

Staff Reports

Senior attackman Dan Denihan scored two goals and added three assists as John Hopkins' 10th-ranked men's lacrosse team held off a late North Carolina rally to post a 10-8 victory against the No. 8 Tar Heels. The victory snaps a two-game losing streak for the Blue Jays (2-3) while UNC (6-3) dropped its third straight contest.

Johns Hopkins started the second half with a 5-0 run to extend its lead to 8-2. North Carolina began a comeback on the second of Jeff Sonke's four goals with 1:47 remaining in the third quarter. The Tar Heels cut further into the lead with back-to-back goals early in the fourth quarter by Mac Hammer and Sonke to make it 8-5 but could not catch Johns Hopkins.

The win is the sixth straight for the Blue Jays against the Tar Heels, who last beat Johns Hopkins in 1994.

Softball Sweeps Cavaliers

UNC Recruit Fingleton Doesn't Dazzle in Indy

Neil Fingleton, a 7-foot-6 center, played just eight minutes in the NABC Nike Hoops Summit on Sunday.

By Will Kimmey
Assistant Sports Editor

INDIANAPOLIS - Neil Fingleton used Sunday's NABC Nike Hoops Summit to show off his tremendous size.

But the 7-foot-6, 295-pound North Carolina recruit didn't get to do much more. The Durham, England, native played just eight minutes as his International men's select team lost to the USA men's select squad 98-97 at Conesco Fieldhouse.

While Fingleton displayed decent agility for a player of his size, he still looked lost at times and didn't move very well without the ball. He also had a hard time coping with the up-and-down nature of the game, which resembled the play at an NBA All-Star game with behind-the-back passes and alley-oop jams.

As a result, he had two offensive touches and finished 0-for-1 from the floor with no points. He failed to grab a rebound but did block one shot.

Fingleton called his outing frustrating and compared it to his appearance at the McDonald's All-American game Wednesday night, when he produced a similar performance.

"With this and the McDonald's game, I don't think it's my kind of style," Fingleton said. "The last two games, I've taken about four shots, which I don't think is a lot of shots when you get the chance to show what you've got."

Fingleton's lack of speed also hurt him defensively. He could not stay with quicker players like Zach Randolph and Darius Miles, both 6-9. Randolph, who has committed to Michigan State, backed Fingleton into the post and used a spin move for two of his game-high 24 points.

Miles, a lanky St. John's recruit, sped past Fingleton to attempt a monster dunk. Miles said that Fingleton's lack of foot speed was his biggest drawback.

"It hurts him especially if he's out in the perimeter trying to stick me," Miles said. "It hurts him a lot."

But Fingleton, who averaged 19.1 points, 14 rebounds and five blocks per game at Holy Name Central Catholic High School in Worcester, Mass., still feels he can contribute at UNC next year.

He knows that he'll have to work on his speed and quickness to crack the Tar Heels' post lineup next year.

Brendan Haywood, Kris Lang and Julius Peppers are slated to return, as is 6-10 Brian Bersticker, who sat out this season with a broken foot. In addition, UNC plans to add Jason Parker, a 6-8 power forward who is playing at Fork Union Military Academy this year, to the roster.

With UNC's depth in the frontcourt, Fingleton, who has played organized basketball for three years, could be red-shirted, a development he said that would be disappointing.

Allesandro Gamba, the International team's coach, said Fingleton has a large up-side and has gotten stronger since he coached him last summer at the Nike Euro Camp.

"He's better than last year, because last year he was very thin," Gamba said. "Now he has some muscle, he has good proportion as a body. Now he has to learn to play basketball."

"He has a world of potential ahead of him and will become a great player at UNC."

and the rest of the defense sparked the attack.

"Our defense came up with big ground balls and it helped us create offense," Thompson said. "And once we got the ball moving, we were able to make things happen."

North Carolina made things happen to the tune of 10 second-half goals. Twice did the Tar Heels score two goals in less than 15 seconds. UNC also twice scored three goals in a span of 90 seconds.

"In the second half, the rhythm was much better than in the first," Slingluff Levy said.

Just as Thompson did, Off, Havrilla, Christine McPike and Betsy Gaines each scored hat tricks for North Carolina.

Balanced scoring has been a UNC trademark this season. In each of the team's wins this season, at least four Tar Heels have scored goals. In three of their wins - including Sunday's - they received goals from seven different players.

"We had a lot of people contribute today," Slingluff Levy said. "That's the great part about our team, that everybody has the ability to do it. We have a lot of different weapons, and as long as everyone comes out, we're really productive on the field."

Sophomore Melissa Coyne started in goal for the Tar Heels but was the victim of North Carolina's soft first-half defense. She allowed five goals on 12 shots.

As planned, freshman Margaret Garofalo came in at halftime and played the second half. She gave up just two goals and played bigger than her 5-foot-1 frame. Garofalo made five saves in the match.

"Margaret's been working really hard (in practice), and she obviously played really well in the second half," Slingluff Levy said. "We're really happy with how she played."

MEN'S TENNIS

cial. Paul changed the doubles combinations and the seedings of his doubles teams because of recent inconsistency among his tandems.

The result was that Archer and Drori, who normally play No. 3 doubles, moved up to No. 1 doubles. There, they matched up against Andersson and Frank Moser, the No. 14 duo in the country.

Said Drori: "It was a team decision to try to help us out. We feel that we can play anywhere."

The pair proved that Saturday. Archer and Drori played a solid match, breaking Andersson's serve twice and Moser's once en route to an 8-4 victory.

In the other two doubles matches, Cheatwood and Phillips rallied to beat Hognlund and Norin 8-6, while Tyne Brownlow and Petrone defeated the VCU duo of Fernando and Jose Sanchez 8-3.

"We haven't been getting the doubles point lately, so it definitely helped to get the point today because these guys are tough in singles," Archer said.

With the bulk of the ACC schedule ahead of them, the Tar Heels will need to continue to play well in doubles.

They also will need a healthy return from Phillips, their leader.

"He's been out for a year and a half, and he's been playing some really good tennis," Paul said. "For him to come in here and beat the No. 1 player in the country, he'll say that the pain is worth it."

"It's just a temporary thing with the cramps, but what a great day for him with everything he has gone through."
