

The University and Towns IN BRIEF

National Blood Bank Dry, Needs Donors

The National Red Cross is experiencing a critical shortage of blood, said Casey Copp, a Red Cross representative.

The Red Cross will sponsor a blood drive from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. today in Union 205, 206 and 208.

Copp said the situation is urgent as well as disheartening. She urges students to donate their blood for a worthy cause.

Former Union Director Howard D. Henry Dies

Howard D. Henry of Viroqua, Wis., died Monday. Henry served as the director of the Student Union, starting in 1956. Henry is survived by his four children.

Medical Cards Available For Senior Citizens

The Chapel Hill Police Department, in conjunction with the Orange County Department of Aging and the AARP, has begun a program of Emergency Medical Information Cards.

The cards are designed to encourage senior citizens with specialized medical needs to record information such as doctor's names, allergies and medical conditions, storing it in a central location. The cards will be distributed at the Chapel Hill Senior Center on Elliot Road, at the Chapel Hill Police Department and at University Mall.

Volunteer Coaches Needed for Fall Season

The Carrboro Parks and Recreation Department is accepting volunteer coaching applications for the 2000 Youth 13- to 14-year-old Baseball League.

Coaches must be able to teach playing skills, sportsmanship and be able to effectively organize practices and communicate with players and parents.

For more information or to receive an application, call Craig Wolfe at 968-7703.

Larry King Scheduled To Speak at University

Larry King, the host of CNN's talk show "Larry King Live," is scheduled to speak at UNC on Oct. 20 on ethics in television news.

King is the top-rated on-air personality at CNN and a 40-year veteran of the broadcasting business.

The speech will be held at 3 p.m. in 111 Carroll Hall. Seating will be limited to the first 425 people to arrive.

University to Co-host Diabetes Conference

The UNC Diabetes Care Center will co-host "Taking Control of Your Diabetes," a nonprofit conference and health fair for people who have diabetes and their loved ones.

The event, held from 7:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. at the Raleigh Civic and Convention Center, provides information about preventing and controlling diabetes. Free nutritional counseling will be available. For more information, e-mail www.tcoyd.org.

Investigation Continues in Ark. Shooting

The Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — A University of Arkansas graduate student found dead near an English professor in an apparent murder-suicide had been kicked out of a degree program last week after a decade of lackluster work.

English professor John Locke, 67, and James Easton Kelly, 36, were found dead Monday, lying face-up on the floor of Locke's office. Both had been shot in the abdomen, university police Capt. Brad Bruns said.

The .38-caliber revolver, which Kelly bought at a pawn shop five years ago, was found between the men; investigators worked Tuesday to find out who shot whom.

"We don't want to say it was one way and it turn out to be a different way, with the location of the gun and the two bodies. It was not obvious at the scene," said university police Lt. Gary Crain.

A panel of six professors voted Aug. 21 to dismiss Kelly from the English department's doctoral program because he habitually dropped classes and made insufficient progress in 10 years as a graduate student. Locke, who was Kelly's faculty adviser, was on the committee but abstained from the vote.

The committee allowed Kelly to continue his studies as a non-degree student. Professor Brian Wilkie recalled that in the mid-1990s Kelly bombed on an oral examination, stumbling through answers and failing to show mastery of required reading material.

"He didn't take his work very seriously," Wilkie said. "He never struck me as a sinister person, just not very motivated."

Wilkie said Kelly had been dropped from the program at least three times. Each time, until last week, the faculty had voted to reinstate him.

A woman enrolled in the school's graduate program in the 1990s said Kelly's performance was erratic.

"He wasn't ever quite on the same track as the rest of us as far as what he was supposed to do for class and coming to class," said Angie Albright, an assistant professor of English at Georgia Southwestern State. "He seemed nice enough, but distant all the time."

Police said Kelly had no criminal record and that there was no indication on his university record of discipline problems. But Locke apparently had some reservations: when Kelly recently scheduled a meeting with Locke, the professor was reluctant to meet in private, Wilkie said.

"He said he was going to have it in the department office, not his own office," Wilkie said. "I asked him if (Kelly) seemed violent, and he said, 'You never know.'"

On Monday, the men could be heard arguing behind the locked door to Locke's office. Witnesses reported hearing three shots. When police entered, they found four empty shell casings in the gun.

A caller to 911 reported hearing a man he believed to be Locke say during the shooting, "I didn't do anything."

Clinton: Disbarment Too Harsh, Unprecedented

The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President Clinton said Tuesday he should not be disbarred over his testimony in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case, telling a state judge that losing his law license is too harsh a penalty.

In a five-page response to a complaint filed by the Arkansas Supreme Court Committee on Professional Conduct, the president said that he would not receive such a stiff sanction if his case was handled like similar cases.

"On the basis of the relevant facts, the governing law and the applicable decisions of the Arkansas courts ..., a sanction of disbarment would be excessively harsh, impermissibly punitive and unprecedented in the circumstances of this case," Clinton's lawyers wrote.

Pulaski County Circuit Judge Leon Johnson said he expected to receive Clinton's filing Tuesday but otherwise would not discuss the case, including when it might be scheduled for a hearing or trial.

The state conduct committee says the president lied about his relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky when asked about it, under oath, in January 1998. Jones' lawyers asked the president about Lewinsky while a federal judge presided over his deposition.

In a lawsuit filed against Clinton on June 30, the conduct committee's prosecutor accused the president of lying to spare himself embarrassment. In the response filed Tuesday, Clinton's lawyers acknowledged that the president was attempting to save face.

Clinton "took actions motivated in part by a desire to protect himself and others from embarrassment," the lawyers wrote.

Jones filed suit in May 1994, alleging Clinton made a crude sexual advance toward her three years earlier in a Little Rock hotel room. Jones had hoped to use evidence of the Lewinsky affair as part of an attempt to show a pattern of predatory behavior.

Wright, however, said the Lewinsky material was not essential to Jones' case, and later dismissed Jones' lawsuit.

Clinton's lawyers said Tuesday that the testimony at the center of the disbarment lawsuit was so minor that stripping the president of his law license would be too severe of a penalty.

Matt Glavin, president of the Southeastern Legal Foundation of Atlanta, which had asked for Clinton's disbarment, said after Tuesday's filing that the proposed sanctions were not too harsh. "Honesty and candor are absolute prerequisites in our bar," Glavin said. "The Supreme Court has made it clear what's required for membership in the Arkansas bar. Mr. Clinton doesn't meet those standards."
