those who were well-educated about the organization.

Grafman said prizes such as UNC basketball tickets also would be awarded Tuesday during the finals of a campus-wide "Roommate Game" held at 8:30 p.m. in the Student Union. The game will consist of UNC residents attempting to guess the personal preferences, such as favorite movie, of their roommates.

RHA officials said the focus of the week is the Wednesday "Vegas Night" event.

Grafman said the event, which will feature betting chips, card playing and karaoke, was designed as an opportunity to benefit the UNC community.

"I wanted to plan a big activity that was going to be fun for students and help a good cause," she said.

Grafman also said RHA hopes to be in the Pit on Thursday promoting the launch of RHA's new Web site, which is nearing completion.

RHA President Robin Yamakawa said it's important to get the word out about RHA because it represents more than 2,000 students on campus.

She said RHA's purpose is to serve student voice and housing concerns.

"We want to make sure everyone knows what's going on," she said.

"We want to let them know we're out there and want to work for them."

Van Orden, who was in the Pit on Monday answering student questions about RHA, said awareness of the organization already has improved from the past year.

"I'm surprised how much people know about RHA this year because last year no one knew much about us," she said.

"But that means we're building communities, which is what RHA is all about."

to do a sound check," Hackney said.

About a half-hour into OutKast's set, the group members expressed their disapproval of the sound and announced onstage that their management had advised them to end their performance and leave the venue.

The sound was corrected after a five minute lull, and OutKast finished its set, but Gran Torino declined to perform after the majority of the audience left following OutKast's performance.

CAA President Tee Pruitt said he received complaints throughout Monday regarding the quality of the show and was displeased with the concert's production.

"Our role was to find a promoter," Pruitt said. "LeNexus is responsible for handling all of the logistics, and their efforts were ridiculously poor."

The CAA began talks in March with LeNexus regarding the concert's production, Pruitt said, and LeNexus took full responsibility for the event afterward.

"We thought it was a good idea to have a big showcase event for Homecoming," Pruitt said. "OutKast seemed perfect because our goal was to draw as many people as possible."

But Pruitt said problems began to arise soon after the CAA reached an agreement with LeNexus. Pruitt claimed the promoters contacted him Nov. 8 with plans to raise student ticket prices from $20 to $23, a proposal Pruitt rejected.

LeNexus Entertainment President Janet Puryear said she had no knowledge of the proposed ticket increase. She said she also lamented the sound system's quality, which was operated by Raleigh-based Rock Quarry Entertainment.

"The sound was horrible, I will agree to that," Puryear said. "We will work very hard in the future to let anything like this happen again."

Puryear said choosing Carmichael Auditorium was a mistake, but the students were promised OutKast, and LeNexus delivered them at a fair price.

Regardless, Pruitt said there are no plans to work with LeNexus in the future. "I can say for sure that we will never have a business relationship with LeNexus again."

Briggaman said hunger prevention is an ongoing process and should not just be addressed once a year.

"You can't solve the problem," she said. "Feeding the hungry is an everyday job."
