

KATHRINE R. EVERETT LAW LIBRARY

Location:

The Law Library supports the education of UNC-CH law students; serves as a research partner with faculty and students; and strives to meet the legal information needs of UNC-CH students and faculty, the legal community, and the citizens of North Carolina.

The Kathrine R. Everett Law Library is located in the newly renovated and expanded Van Hecke-Wettach Hall along with the UNC School of Law at 100

Ridge Road. Many of the Law Library's resources are available remotely through the Library's Web site at library.law.unc.edu.

Collections:

The Law Library contains approximately 500,000 items. The collection includes basic Anglo-American legal materials such as: court reports for American, British, and Canadian appellate courts; current codes and session laws for all states; administrative regulations of many states; and other primary legal materials. Treatises, digests, encyclopedias, citations, loose-leaf services, and other materials of interest to the legal profession are also available. A collection of records and briefs for the North Carolina courts, the Fourth Court of Appeals, and the United States Supreme Court is provided for Library users. The Law Library is a selective depository for Federal government documents. The collection has special strengths in banking law and civil rights, to support the Center for Banking and Finance and the Center for Civil Rights at the School of Law.

Services:

The Library tries to accommodate the special needs of patrons. Please ask at the Circulation Desk.

Borrowing: UNC-CH faculty, students, and staff may borrow materials from the Law Library using a valid UNC One Card. Borrowing privileges may also be extended to others upon application at the Circulation Desk.

Reference: The staff at the Reference Desk help patrons with legal research and with questions about the collection but do not give legal advice. The staff assist users with locating and using legal materials and also answer questions via email at: Law_Reference@unc.edu.

Tours and Instruction: Tours and orientation sessions for groups may be arranged by contacting the head of Research and User Services at 962-1605. These sessions can be tailored to the research needs of a particular class.

Law School faculty may request that a reference librarian provide guest instruction on the use of legal research sources related to the topic of a course. Law students are encouraged to take advantage of the Advanced Legal Research law course taught by reference librarians.

Web Site:

The Law Library Web site (library.law.unc.edu) provides information about hours, policies, and services, as well as links to judicial opinions, statutes, regulations, and other major legal resources from North Carolina, the Federal government, and the international community.

The Law Library newsletter, LLUNC-CH Times, available through the Web site, provides information about developing services and legal research techniques.

Law Library Hours:

The Library opens before classes begin each morning and remains open late into the evening to accommodate student and faculty needs. The schedule varies with holidays and vacations. To check hours, call 549-4556 or check the Law Library Web site at library.law.unc.edu.

Health Sciences Library

South Columbia Street www.hsl.unc.edu

The Health Sciences Library is open to the public, and users have free access to the open collections. The Library contains more than 316,000 volumes, including recent and historical materials; 3,600 current serial titles; and more than 2,000 audiovisual and microcomputer software programs.

Renovation in 2002:

Construction will begin in spring 2002. While exciting, this means that services, collections, and staff will be changing locations. The Library will remain open during construction and services will be available. Please visit our Web site (www.hsl.unc.edu) and check ahead to avoid inconveniences. Subscribe to HSL-LIBNEWS for email announcements of changes that will affect your use of the Library. For more information see www.hsl.unc.edu/renovation/renovation.cfm.

You will find other useful items on the Library's Web site: library hours, class schedules, how-to guides, forms to request services, the new books list, and more.

Borrowing Privileges:

Faculty, staff, and students of UNC-CH and UNC Hospitals may check out Library materials with a hospital ID badge or a valid UNC One Card. Duke and other UNC universities' patrons may also borrow materials using reciprocal borrowing procedures. Photo identification is needed. For information about these procedures and loan periods, call 962-0800 or use the Health Sciences Library's Web site.

Photocopying and Laser Printing Services:

The Health Sciences Library uses the UNC One Card and University Guest Cards for copying and for printing from computer workstations. For more information, call the One Card office at 962-1385.

Live Online Help:

This fall a new feature called Live Online Help will be available. It will enable patrons to connect to the library via the Web to post questions and receive guidance from librarians. Live Online Help will be useful to anyone doing online research but is being offered especially to meet the needs of distance education students. It is a service of the Health Sciences Library and Davis Library. Look for announcements on the Libraries' Web sites: www.hsl.unc.edu and www.lib.unc.edu.

UNCLE (Electronic Health Information):

UNCLE enables you to search information resources from your home, office, or library computer workstation. Index databases such as MEDLINE and International Pharmaceutical Abstracts (IPA), clinical information tools such as Clinical Pharmacology and MD Consult, as well as selected Internet sites and over 1,200 full text journals such as JAMA, New England Journal of Medicine, and Science are available.

UNCLE is directly accessible on the Web: www.uncle.unc.edu. It is also linked from the UNC-CH Libraries Web site (www.lib.unc.edu) and the Health Sciences Library Web site (www.hsl.unc.edu). On-campus users do not need a password for access to UNCLE resources.

Off-campus access to licensed UNCLE resources is available to UNC-CH faculty, staff, and students and to UNC Hospitals and AHEC employees via authentication to the UNC-CH Libraries' proxy server.

For more information about or assistance with UNCLE, contact the Health Sciences Library (962-0800; fax 966-5592; Ask A Librarian email form: www.hsl.unc.edu/hsl/ref/asklib.cfm), or consult the HELP section of the UNCLE Web site (www.uncle.unc.edu; click on HELP link).

UNCLE is jointly developed and managed by the Health Sciences Library (HSL) and the Office of Information Systems (OIS) in the School of Medicine. Funding for UNCLE is provided in part by the UNC-CH Division of Health Affairs.

Teaching Lab:

The lab is available during fall 2001 for instructional purposes. It contains 14 student workstations and an instructor's workstation with computerized projection equipment. The lab will close December 2001 for renovation.

ATN Computer Lab:

Academic Technology and Networks maintains a computer lab and IT Response Center on the lower level of the Library where general-purpose applications workstations are available on a walk-in basis. The Lab Help Desk phone is 966-1047. IT Response Center is 962-HELP. The networks in the Teaching Lab and the ATN Computer Lab also allow access to the Internet, UNCLE, and the Online Catalogs. Contact the User Services Desk at 962-0800. The lab will close December 2001 for renovation.

Audiovisuals, Software, Reserves, and Educational Media Design:

The Library provides these services in support of teaching and learning. A Reserves Room, Media Kitchen, and audiovisual viewing rooms are available. Full-time staff provide consultation and in-depth information services. Staff assist faculty in identifying, evaluating, using, or designing audiovisuals and multimedia software in the curriculum. Call 962-0800 or send email to asklib@med.unc.edu.

Customized Help at Your Convenience:

Free consultations are available by appointment with a Library staff member who has expertise in the subject area or information resource in which you are interested. Consultations are customized, focused, efficient, and instructive. Consultants can help you with:

- Creating or customizing multimedia software or online courses with information resources
- Analysis of search strategies or results
- Investigation of Internet resources
- Literature review guidance for thesis or dissertation

...or whatever your work or study requires. Call 962-0800, send email to asklib@med.unc.edu, or go to www.hsl.unc.edu/services/asklib.cfm for more information or to schedule an appointment.
