

COLLEGE CUTS

"We are working with the community college office to determine what impact any potential cut would have on the institution," he said.

Rhew said the college is looking for efficient ways to cut costs without drastically affecting students.
Rhew said summer school classes would be the first thing cut if necessary. "We believe cuts to summer terms would be less disruptive to the students."

Bush Urges Aid for Small Businesses

The Associated Press

O'FALLON, Mo. — Despite promising signs on both the war and the economy, President Bush warned Monday, "We're not out of the woods yet." He offered new help for small businesses and demanded that he get his way in boosting the Pentagon budget.

"I don't want Congress messing with the budget," Bush said on a political trip that melded patriotic talk of war with his views on tax cuts and the budget.

With most economic indicators suggesting that the recession is over, Bush is not ready to abandon economic recovery and job creation as the driving argument behind his tax proposals — some of which Congress already ignored once, when it approved economic stimulus legislation earlier this month.

"Even though the economic news has been positive, in my judgment we're not out of the woods yet. We've got to keep working for policies in place that encourage more job creation," Bush said.

White House press secretary Ari Fleischer elaborated, "His big concern is we not have a jobless recovery."

He endorsed an increase in the amount of equipment and machinery that companies can deduct in one year from $24,000 to $40,000. It was in almost every version of the bill but didn't make the final one, frustrating many business groups such as the National Federation of Independent Business, the largest small-business lobbying group.

Joking that some of his proposals were understandable only by accountants, Bush told small-business chief Rolf G. Albers and his employees, "Let me see if I can put this in English or Texan."

"I'm trying to put in place something that will encourage Rolf to go buy a new piece of machinery ... that will make his business more competitive, and therefore more likely to be able to hire somebody; that will help the manufacturer of the machine employ somebody; that will have an effect throughout the entire economy," Bush said.

Most new jobs are created by small businesses and Bush said it was his job "to create an environment in which the entrepreneurial spirit flourishes."

and design stage, and the last step will be to reconcile the cost of the project with budget expenditures.

The entire project will cost about $14 million because of a decision to add a gymnasium instead of a multipurpose room, the costs of which will be covered by the town of Chapel Hill.

In addition, East West Partners will construct playing fields that will run adjacent to the park facilities. Such extra costs will not be included in the allocated bond money and will be covered by the developers.

The gymnasium upgrade will cost the town $750,000, and the playing fields will cost the developers $824,052.

The original plans for Meadowmont, designed by East West Partners, included a site for the school. The site was then considered by the town for the facility's construction.

Jim Riley, the projects coordinator for East West Partners, said the board's decision is one of the last steps needed for both the construction of the school and the completion of Meadowmont.

"(The school) is one of the last pieces of the puzzle for Meadowmont."

accused, they have the chance to file written responses to the charges or they can decide to forfeit their own license, which eliminates the need for a formal hearing, Breaden said.

Breaden would not discuss specifics of the case, including who filed the charges, and did not specify whether Lapaglia has responded to the report.

But he said disciplinary actions concerning resident physicians are "not rare but not frequent."

Hughes said it is ultimately up to the medical board as to what action, if any, is taken against Lapaglia.

"It is completely the board's decision as to whether or not he will still have a license, so this is really just a wait-and-see situation for us."

In a society where one out of 15 people is infected with HIV, Mohamed said it is important for youths, armed with information, to spread education to other youths. He compared the situation to the adage that only a thief can catch a thief.

"We give you skills to do something positive in the community," Mohamed said. On that note, he explained that he is trying to raise funds for ongoing CFK projects, such as sewage cleanup, a Montessori school called Carolina Academy and a local medical clinic called Rye Medical Clinic. This summer, volunteers from UNC will start a soccer training camp for girls.

Barcott attributed the success of CFK to the hands-on leadership of the people in Kibera. "The reason this is successful is because this is not a UNC student thing but a Kibera thing," he said.

"The volunteers are the bomb, but this is led by the youth in Kibera."

Heather Messera, a junior peace, war and defense and political science major, volunteered with CFK and said the experiences of Mohamed and other CFK volunteers give her hope. "I'm amazed at how they have risen above their situation and not taken the passive road."

Sport Clubs Weekly...

Sport Clubs

Women's Lacrosse is a fast-paced, exciting sport. Lacrosse is known to many as "the fastest game on two feet." The men and women's game differ in the level of contact (and therefore padding) and pocket size of the crosse. The crosse, a stick with a net on the end, is used to catch and throw the ball. The game involves two teams with 12 players on the field at a time, and the object of the game is to score!

The Women's Club Lacrosse team at UNC competes with other university club teams along the East coast. The club played well in the ECU fall tournament and in the South of the Border tournament this spring. The club hosts their own tournament the weekend of March 23. Games will run from about 12-4 on Saturday and 9-1 on Sunday.
