Darah McClain, a sophomore psychology major from Charlotte, said she was unhappy with her search for an internship.

"I was disappointed in the number of available internships within my major here in Chapel Hill," McClain said she thought she did not have support during her search for an internship and did not find anything that would allow her to gain more experience in her field.

But other students said they were able to find jobs or internships but decided to stay in Chapel Hill to take courses.

Sophomore Deanna Carvalho, a journalism major from Charlotte, said she decided to take summer courses in order to receive more credit hours. Carvalho said she turned down an internship in Charlotte and then was unable to secure an internship locally.

Recent graduate Lauren Sumner said she landed a graphic design job after interviewing for about five months.

"The economy is not as good as it had been in past years, and I think a lot of people who have just graduated have had trouble getting jobs," Sumner said.

Most students said attending summer school gives them the opportunity to fulfill major perspectives and, for some, to complete final graduation requirements.

Sophomore Allison Osborne, a biology major from Greensboro, said she decided to take classes to fulfill some of her major requirements.

"I heard that Physics 26 and Physics 27 were easier to take during summer school, so I decided to give it a try."

rounding area, which will be developed as "Carolina North," a campus scheduled to include office and classroom buildings, as well as technological facilities. The mixed-use complex would occupy 575 acres of the 979-acre Horace Williams tract owned by UNC.

According to AOPA's Web site, Black has agreed to discuss the airport's closing with several University trustees.

Carolyn Ellland, vice chancellor for campus services, said no specific date has been set for the facility's closure but that in the meantime, airport users are moving forward with plans to vacate the grounds.

Ellland said naming a closure date will depend on the N.C. Area Health Education Centers Program's relocation efforts.

AHEC is based out of the UNC School of Medicine and works to provide other parts of the state with the expertise of UNC medical faculty. The program has used the airport to transport faculty statewide so they can provide specialty clinics and educational programs.

"We are still in the process of reviewing alternative locations for medical air operations," said Tom Bacon, director of AHEC.

Bacon said cost, convenience and safety are the program's main criteria for finding a suitable new base for its air operations.

Among the new locations being considered are the Raleigh-Durham International Airport and the Sanford-Lee Airport, located between Sanford and Raleigh.

Scott Faces Assault Charge

By TIM CANDON
Staff Writer

North Carolina men's basketball player Melvin Scott will appear in Orange County District Court in Hillsborough on Monday on one charge of misdemeanor assault on a female.

The charge stems from an incident at about 1:30 a.m. May 2 at Players nightclub, reports state.

Scott allegedly punched a female in her face, causing minor swelling and a scratch above her upper lip, said Jane Cousins, Chapel Hill police spokeswoman. The victim, a UNC student, received treatment at the scene and then filed a statement, Cousins said.

Reports state that Scott was arrested shortly after 9 a.m. Reports also state that drugs and alcohol were involved but did not specify who might have been under the influence.

Steve Woodham, owner and manager of Players, said Scott, 20, was able to enter the 21-and-over club because it was being used for a party that allowed people 18 years old and older to enter. Wristbands were issued to people 21 years old and older to prevent underage drinking, he added.

According to a statement, UNC men's basketball coach Matt Doherty indicated Scott plans to fight the charge.

"I have spoken to Melvin, and he has told me a different version of the events," Doherty said in the statement. "We take this seriously and will look into the matter completely. We will continue to monitor the situation as it proceeds through proper legal channels."

UNC student-athletes charged with a felony are immediately suspended from their team until the case is resolved, said Steve Kirschner, UNC director of athletic communications. Misdemeanors are handled on a case-by-case basis by the player's coach and the athletic director.

Scott, a freshman from Baltimore, appeared in every game for the Tar Heels last season, averaging 6.2 points and 2.0 assists per game.

If convicted, Scott faces anywhere from probation to two years in prison.

Pitching Key to Postseason

By KELLIE DIXON
Sports Editor

Coach Mike Fox shifted his weight and paced slightly outside then inside the Tar Heels' dugout Tuesday afternoon, his words barely audible to his team sitting less than 5 feet away. Tractors growled as the groundskeepers trimmed the field after the morning's scrimmage.

But despite the noise in the outfield and the droning of electrical saws working to pin up the backstop, his players heard every word.

"All of us realize this part of the season is really the part that counts," said Russ Adams, a junior infielder who is leading North Carolina with a .374 batting average. "It's kind of like a new season, we're starting all over again."

And starting over might be the best thing for the UNC team after a disappointing performance in last week's ACC tournament. From that tournament, UNC earned a second seed in NCAA Regional Division I play.

North Carolina (40-19, 17-7) traveled to Columbia, S.C., on Wednesday to prepare for Friday's 2 p.m. bout with third-seeded James Madison University.

UNC never before has faced the Dukes (43-14) in post-season play. The tournament is double elimination, and the Tar Heels could face two other teams this weekend — first-seeded South Carolina or fourth-seeded Virginia Commonwealth (38-25).

The Gamecocks (48-14) are hosting the tournament for the third consecutive year at Sarge Frye Field.

Fox cited pitching as the one area UNC needed to improve. During the last few weeks, North Carolina's pitchers haven't been producing at the same level they were during the regular season — a fact that has caused concern.

"You've got to have a good team," he said. "You have to have very good pitching, and more importantly, you've got to know and expect that you can do it."

Right-handed pitcher Scott Autrey, who has appeared in 15 games, is slated to open the tournament for the Tar Heels. He is 4-3 on the season with a 4.98 earned run average.

But the Tar Heels don't expect to have any trouble competing in this weekend's tournament.

"We've played some of the best games in the country," Adams said.

"The competition in the ACC is so great that we're really prepared for the competition and the level of play we'll see throughout the regional and the whole way," he said.

In addition to the experience factor, several Tar Heels hope to use this weekend as a chance to further break school records. Outfielder Adam Greenberg needs to score four more runs to beat the single-season school record of 79.

Senior Chris Maples, who set single-season school records for extra-base hits (46) and total bases (181), is two shy of reaching the school record of 24 home runs, set in 1986.

Instead of solely pinpointing a strategy for Friday's opener, Fox articulated a vision for his players during Tuesday's post-practice speech.

He told them about his experience in 1978 when as a Tar Heel second baseman, he reached the College World Series in Omaha, Neb.

"It's really the first time I've ever mentioned it to them because I wanted to try and explain to them what a great feeling it is and how it makes everything worthwhile," he said.

"There's no team that can be more prepared to go into the tournament than ours."

Men's Golf Swings for National Title

By KELLIE DIXON

Five members of the North Carolina men's golf team will travel to Columbus, Ohio, today to compete against 29 other teams for the national championship.

The golf team qualified for the tournament May 18 following a third-place finish at the NCAA East Regional, where the Tar Heels shot a team total of 877 and finished just one stroke behind regional co-champions Clemson and Georgia Tech, who finished at 876.

The tournament will be held at Ohio State's Scarlet Course. The five-member North Carolina squad includes tri-captains Ramon Bescansa, Dustin Bray and Bob Cherry as well as juniors Jeremy Elliott and Brad Moldin.

Coach John Inman says he's proud of his team's progress and expects them to unleash their potential this weekend. "They're all playing very well, and they're all contributing toward good team scores," he said.

In the first part of the tournament, each five-member team is paired with two other teams.

The combined scores of each team determines who advances to the next round.

Inman says he is not concerned about the stiff competition his team can expect to face.

"We know there are 30 good golf teams there, so we're happy to be going and participating, obviously," he said.

"It's something that doesn't really matter who it is you're playing with because you're playing the golf course. You're not playing them individually."

The Tar Heels are gunning for their first team championship in school histo-

ACC champion Dustin Bray tallied a 71-stroke average this spring that could boost his team in NCAA play.

ry. However, two players have won the individual championship — Harvie Ward in 1949 and Inman in 1984.

SPORTS BRIEFS

9 Track Members Trek South for Tournament

Nine members of the North Carolina track teams will represent UNC at the 2002 NCAA championships in Baton Rouge, La., through Saturday. Seven members of the UNC women's team and two from the men's squad will join 767 other participants in the championships hosted by Louisiana State University.

Freshman Laura Gerraughty leads the way for the Tar Heels by qualifying in two events (shot put, hammer). Gerraughty will be joined by Shalane Flanagan (1500-meter run), Alice Schmidt (800-meter run), Erin Donohue (1500-meter run), Edi Ntuen (400-meter run), Carol Henry (3000-meter steeplechase) and Tiffany Flomo (400-meter hurdles).

For the UNC men's team, senior Adam Shunk will compete in the high jump and senior Michael Cvelbar will compete in the decathlon.

Gerraughty, from Nashua, N.H., leads the NCAA in the shot put this year at 57-5 and has set UNC records in the shot put and the hammer (193-5) this season.

Flanagan, a sophomore from Marblehead, Mass., is second nationally in the 1500-meter run at 4 minutes, 15.3 seconds. Flanagan was an All-America in the 1500 meter last year and has won the ACC 1500 meter title the last two seasons. She also holds the UNC and ACC championships record in the event.

Schmidt, a sophomore from Omaha, Neb., was an All-America in the 800-meter run last season and has won two straight ACC championships in the event. Her top time of 2:04.74 this season is seventh fastest in the nation.

Ntuen, a senior from Greensboro, qualified for the 400-meter run with a time of 52.78 on April 20 en route to an ACC title in the event.

Donohue, a freshman from Haddonfield, N.J., joins Flanagan in the 1500-meter run after posting a qualifying time of 4:20.72 on May 17.

Flomo will run for UNC in the 400-meter hurdles. The Columbus, Ohio, sophomore ran a 58.24 in the event to win the ACC title.

Henry, a freshman from Parry Sound, Ontario, set a school record in the 3000-meter steeplechase this year at 10:04.66, also the sixth fastest time in the nation this season.

Shunk, from Muncie, Ind., won the 2002 ACC high jump title, and his season-best jump of 7-3 is the third highest in the nation this season.

Cvelbar qualified for the championships by posting a total of 7,482 points in the decathlon on March 21. The senior from Mentor, Ohio, was an All-America in the event last year and won the 2002 ACC decathlon title as well.

Tolleson Honored With All-America Selection

Tiffany Tolleson, an outfielder on North Carolina's softball team, earned All-America honors for the 2002 season.

Tolleson, of Winter Haven, Fla., was named to the 18-member Division I second team, announced by the National Fastpitch Coaches Association Friday.

Tolleson, a junior, is the fifth North Carolina softball player to earn All-America honors. Christine Kubin (1996) and Brandy Arthur (1998) earned first-team selections, and Theresa Buscemi (1992) and Kelly Ramsey (2000) earned third-team honors.

Tolleson was the team's starting center fielder and led the Tar Heels with a .411 batting average.

In her first year at North Carolina after transferring from Stetson University, Tolleson broke school single-season records for hits, runs, at-bats and stolen bases. She finished second in the nation in stolen bases per game. She earned All-ACC honors and has been invited to try out for the U.S. National Team at the USA Softball World Championships selection camp until June 3 in Chula Vista, Calif.

UNC finished the 2002 season with a record of 34-30.
