

WHEN PUPPETS ATTACK

DTH/GARRETT HALL

Back for the second year in a row, the members of the Paper Hand Puppet Intervention don massive masks and costumes for their performance in Forest Theatre. The puppeteers try to capture emotion and story through the puppets' actions and painted expressions rather than conventional theatrics such as dialogue. The puppets, a few of which tower at more than 8 feet, will take over the theater for two more performances this fall on Thursday and Friday. Admission to each performance is free. Check the sign outside the theater for show times.

Nominee sets rules for working with Israel

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
RAMALLAH, West Bank — Palestinian parliament speaker Ahmed Qureia said Monday he will only accept his nomination as prime minister if Washington guarantees Israeli compliance with a U.S.-backed peace plan, including a halt to military strikes.

months in office, which were marred by wrangling with veteran leader Yasser Arafat. However, sources close to Qureia said he already has agreed in principle to take the job offered him by Arafat and his formal acceptance is expected to be announced in the coming days.

against Arafat, Palestinian officials said. After Abbas' resignation, there had been growing calls, including by Israeli Cabinet ministers, to expel Arafat. It remains unclear if Israel will agree to deal with Qureia. Israeli leaders have not commented publicly on Qureia's nomination but have said they will not negotiate with any new government controlled or handpicked by Arafat.

and the PLO — to form a new government Sunday shortly after his nomination was confirmed by top officials in Fatah and the PLO, said Nabil Abu Rdenah, an aide to Arafat. Abbas' departure dealt a serious blow to the U.S.-backed road map plan for establishing a Palestinian state by 2005. But Palestinian Foreign Minister Nabil Shaath said the "peace process did not die, and the principles (of the road map) we had agreed upon are acceptable to everybody."
