UNC Special Teams

Punter: John Lafferty
Kicker: Dan Orner: 6-of-9 FG this season, third in ACC.
Punt Returner: Michael Waddell: leads ACC with 14.6-yard average.
Kick Returner: Michael Waddell: 35.3 yards per return

Game and Time: Virginia at North Carolina. Kickoff is at 1:30 p.m.

Site: Kenan Stadium

TV/Radio: The game will not be televised. The Tar Heel Sports Network will provide live radio coverage; its flagship station is WCHL 1360-AM.

Records: Virginia is 3-1, 2-0 in the ACC. North Carolina is 0-4, 0-2 in the ACC.

Series: UNC leads 56-47-4.

Personnel update: Virginia - no injuries reported. UNC - CB Cedrick Holt, broken left ankle (out); WR Daunte Fields, broken right foot (out).

The key matchup: The Virginia passing attack against the North Carolina secondary will be crucial. Everyone knows that the Cavaliers are going to run the ball effectively behind RB Wali Lundy, who rushed for 137 yards against Wake Forest last Saturday.

The Tar Heels have no semblance of a run defense, allowing 216.8 yards per game on the ground, and this week they will not have the virtue of facing a backup running back for the third week in a row.

But what will be interesting to see is whether the Virginia pass offense, led by returning senior quarterback Matt Schaub, gets back on track.

Schaub returned last week after missing two games with an injured shoulder. Although he passed for 326 yards in the contest, he threw three second-half interceptions, allowing the Demon Dacons to nearly steal the game in Charlottesville.

The Bottom Line — Virginia 34, UNC 24

COMPILED BY JACOB KARABELL

Unfortunately for the Tar Heels, the secondary was stretched even thinner with Cedrick Holt's injury. While safeties Mahlon Carey and Dexter Reid have been the unit's bright spots, cornerbacks Chris Hawkins and Lionel Green cannot afford to let Virginia's inexperienced wide receivers catch 10- and 15-yard passes at will.

The Tar Heel offense, meanwhile, should be able to get some points on the board - it's just a matter of whether the team's defense keeps the score close.

Quarterback Darian Durant had an impressive game against N.C. State last week, throwing for 323 yards and three touchdowns. And while Virginia's defense is stronger against the pass than the rush, Durant and his wide receivers, particularly Jarwarski Pollock, seem to be building an impressive chemistry. And expect Jacque Lewis to make some catches in the flats out of the backfield.

The running game is another matter. Despite the Tar Heels' plethora of options, they have done little out of the backfield; Durant has been the team's leading rusher in two games thus far this season. If the North Carolina running game can't break a big play early, it will become increasingly difficult for Durant to find open receivers amidst nickel and dime coverage packages.

Final analysis/prediction: This game is winnable for UNC.

Despite the Tar Heels' infamously poor defense, which still ranks last in Division I-A, the Virginia offense is far from perfect. With a couple of turnovers or a lucky break, the Tar Heels may have a chance to get the Family Weekend crowd going.

Then again, the more likely reality is that Schaub will have the breakout game that the Cavaliers thought the quarterback would when they deemed him a Heisman candidate before the season started.

While Schaub's Heisman campaign might be a stretch these days, a win on the road at Kenan Stadium certainly isn't.
