

George Leamon and Doug Melton SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

As senior class president and vice president, Leamon and Melton put in a great deal of effort to meet the expectations of the class of 2004. But that effort fell short in a number of categories, particularly in those categories that mattered the most. Without success in several key obligations of the office, their term falls flat.

ISSUES

Get seniors involved in the selection of the 2004 Commencement speaker.

Facilitate input regarding the class of 2004's gift to the University.

Implement a senior service project in which seniors can participate without much hardship or difficulty.

Choose eager, dedicated and hard-working senior marshals.

Organize a variety of fund raising, service and social events for seniors.

COMMENTS

The officers are responsible for the noticeable lack of senior input in this year's process. Julius Chambers, this year's speaker, is highly respected, but he is already a faculty member.

Again, the pair should have made greater efforts to get more seniors in the loop.

Many graduating seniors would be hard-pressed to donate their CCI laptop computers to campus and nonprofit groups, as is called for by the officers' drive.

This year's marshals performed well, judging by their undeniable effort and the measurable success of the many different types of events that took place.

With the help of the marshals, Leamon and Melton brought about a substantial array of senior nights at local bars, blood drives and fund-raising efforts.

Dan Herman

GPSF PRESIDENT

Herman has done a remarkable job of following in Branson Page's footsteps and continuing the success of the Graduate and Professional Student Federation.

ISSUES

Continue the previous administration's work to address graduate and professional student concerns

Work with UNC administrators in responding to students' needs for child care services

Explore how the Honor Code applies to graduate and professional students and teaching assistants

Make necessary changes to Honor Court systems for UNC's graduate and professional schools

Work to improve effectiveness of UNC's Counseling and Psychological Services

COMMENTS

Herman appropriately has drawn on former GPSF President Page's platform and has built upon strong ideas.

With the success of a child-care fair, Herman's efforts to improve services have been met with considerable progress.

While no blanket standard is available, Herman has been working toward instituting a mandatory honor code test for TAs.

More Honor Court positions have been created and more resources have been allotted for graduate and professional courts.

Herman's administration has worked with a health policy coordinator and an advisory group to shorten CAPS response times.

Sherrell McMillan

CAA PRESIDENT

The Carolina Athletic Association's perception among students has improved markedly under McMillan's leadership.

ISSUES

Encourage student participation with better Homecoming events

UNC ONE Card entrance policy at athletic events

Improving communication between students and security officials

ONE Card accessibility at event concessions

Repair CAA's poor reputation

COMMENTS

Improved overall atmosphere by tripling number of events and generating increased attendance.

Ensuring student use of student tickets helps in arguments for more student seats but causes short-term headaches for fans.

A security panel has helped to establish priorities of event security officials and clear communication channels with students.

Implemented groundwork for further use of ONE Cards to pay for drinks and snacks at games.

McMillan has worked to ensure that CAA officers run a clean show and don't abuse their ticket privileges.

Kristin Conte

RHA PRESIDENT

Conte's platform was meager and vague, and her leadership of the Residence Hall Association has failed to yield significant improvements.

ISSUES

Implement more campuswide programs

Increase RHA involvement

Bid to host RHA state conference at UNC

Enhance security initiatives

Solicit feedback from students regarding potential ban on smoking

COMMENTS

Conte's vague platform suggestion for fun programming has been substantiated by weak events such as "Camp Crafty."

Recruited officers to fill vacant area governments in Connor, Cobb and Craige residence halls.

While Conte got shot down for hosting a state summit in the immediate future, RHA hopes to place a bid a few years from now.

Conte met with University officials but has few accomplishments to show for those meetings, other than a community watch.

RHA's ill-conceived recommendation to ban smoking in residence halls was justified by an unscientific survey.

Student Congress

UNDER LEADERSHIP OF WILL DUPONT

The 85th has had really good highs and really bad lows, but hard work from Charlie Anderson and Abby Youngken, among others, has compensated for faulty leadership.

ISSUES

Response to the UNC Board of Trustees' tuition proposal

Constitutional funding for the executive and judicial branches of student government

Examining and tweaking the Student Code to clarify and correct its many flaws

Fair distribution of funds for student organizations and speakers

Creation of stipends for student government officers

COMMENTS

Congress' resolution to oppose the hikes was released well after the BOT's vote and thus was ineffective.

Members of Congress who opposed the fee shift actively and successfully campaigned for the referendum's defeat.

Congress changed and enforced part of the Code, such as the appointment of a solicitor general, but far more must be done.

While Congress made several controversial appropriations, it gave money in a fair manner to groups that best identified their intent.

New stipends are in place that will allow students to hold officers more accountable and will show appreciation for their effort.
