The Daily Tar Heel

E that Saturday marks the first football game of the season.

Some might not know the opponent (Division I-AA William & Mary) or the kickoff time (1:35 p.m.), but they still know that it's game number one.

And that's for a team coming off a 2-10 season that isn't expect-ed to be competitive in the ACC, let alone on the national level.

How many people realized that field hockey started its season last week?

Everyone raising a hand needs to put it back down. And for the follow-up, who knew that the field hockey team is already 0.0 includes a final final set is already 2-0, including a vic-tory against Michigan, the team that knocked it out of the NCAA Tournament last year?

To the 21 ladies with their hands up, I know you're on the team. Field hockey returns every starter from a team that was starter from a team that was ranked as high as No. 2 last season and enters this year with national championship aspirations. It is one of three UNC fall sports teams that can legitimately make such a claim, along with men's and women's soccer. (Surprise!) Yet, field hockey often finds itself passing below the casual fan's football-focused radar.

The team plays in the ACC, one of the top two field hockey confer-ences in the country, the other being the Big 10. The defending NCAA champion is Wake Forest, who topped Duke in the final.

But don't worry about the Tar Heels being able to compete - there is some outstanding talent on this team.

Forward Kelsey Keeran's 43 points last year earned her one of 16 spots on the All-America team. Being named first-team All-

America is something North

VIEW FROM THE COUCH Carolina's heralded basketball players have been unable to accomplish since Joseph Forte did it in 2000-01. After scoring four goals to power the Tar Heels' two open-ing-week victories, forward Karen Mann was named field hockey's AGC News of the bockey's ACC Player of the Week. Contributions are coming from all classes — sophomore Rachel Dawson and freshman Anne Marie Janus will play crucial roles in the team's ultimate destiny.

At this point, I do have to state something for the record regarding a wee bit of hypocrisy. I haven't seen a field hockey game since I came down to UNC in the fall of 2001. And it took a look in the media guide to name a single player, let alone the starters. Wait! Before you move on to the crossword, let me explain.

As a member of the sports desk, I've known that the field hockey team has been good for several years. And I did read up on them before I got down to school, which culminated in me reading all the way to the end of an article on the team for the first time last week.

I'm thinking that article was a start, something that got me interested enough to actually get up and go out to Henry Stadium. If I did my job here, I'll be seeing you at 1 p.m. Sept. 18. (Before the third football game.)

Field hockey UNC lineup set for W&M opener

Edwards denied starting position

BY JACOB KARABELL

For Larry Edwards, the journey back to the starting block is complete

The sophomore linebacker for North Carolina, who stood out last season starting in eight games as a true freshman, has officially lost his weak side starting spot to junior Jeff Longhany for Saturday's season opener against William & Mary at Kenan Stadium.

"At some point, I hope that Larry Edwards makes a contri-bution at linebacker again," head coach John Bunting said Tuesday at his weekly press conference. "Right now, he's playing on most every special team, and trying to work his way back into a role with our defense.

Edwards came into training camp out of shape, leading Bunting and the coaching staff to increase Longhany's role. Bunting has pointed out in recent days that Edwards has progressed, but apparently not enough to regain his former position yet.

Longhany started four games last season but did not crack this summer's UNC two-deep depth chart.

The other starting linebackers on Saturday will be sophomore Fred Sparkman in the middle and junior Tommy Richardson, who played strong safety his first two seasons in Chapel Hill, at the strong side.

"I'm a little bit more aggressive than a strong safety should be, coming up and biting too much on the run fake," Richardson said. "Now, I can bite on the run fake and just run out, and not get in trouble anymore."

In front of the linebackers, questions remain as to how Bunting plans to rotate players at the defen ve tackle position. The secondary, meanwhile, Though senior Jonas Seawright should be boosted with the addisive tackle position.

are currently projected to start on Saturday, Bunting made it clear that highly touted freshman Khalif Mitchell, who switched positions from defensive end two Sensabaugh, who transferred from East Tennessee State last season after its program folded.

"He's really been a pleasure to be around," Bunting said. "He's got great instincts, particularly against the run. And he's a very inquisitive football player ... I'm expecting big things from him. He's caught on with our defense, and I think he's really flourished under the tutelage of (defensive coordinator) Marvin Sanders

That Tar Heel defense will have to concern itself with Division I-AA All-America candidate Lang Campbell at quarterback on Saturday, the marquee player on a William & Mary team projected to finish third in the Atlantic 10's South Division.

"Pretty doggone good," said Bunting of Campbell's accomplishments. "He has a strong arm, he throws all the throws ... he was real good last year, I expect he's going to be pretty doggone good this year." Campbell's pass efficiency rating of 152.1 topped the Atlantic 10 last season, and it could challenge a North Carolina defense that ranked 111th out of 117 teams in pass defense nationwide in 2003.

"He's a pretty good, well-round-ed quarterback," Richardson said. "He has a tendency to stare a receiver down somewhat, but I'm sure he's going to be coming out with his best effort.

"Everyone will be coming out gunning for us, I'm sure.'
