

KINNAIRD

FROM PAGE 3

political arena. "Life changed radically with the women's movement," she said.

A greater feminine presence would better the legislature because women, who are more detached from the business world, are less likely to cater to special interests, Kinnaird said.

"When the home-builders speak, environmental concerns are lost," she said. "When the government asks for incentives for business, they are more willing to give than they would for community colleges, the elderly and day care."

Kinnaird was elected Carrboro mayor in 1987 and was known for her focus on the environment, downtown revitalization and neighborhood restoration. In the mid-1990s, colleagues encouraged her to take her love of nature to the N.C. Senate.

While a senator, Kinnaird has worked for the preservation of farmland and open spaces, the reduction of automobile emissions and the cleaning of corporate hog operations and power plants.

Formerly a legal services lawyer and now in private practice, Kinnaird said her main goal has been to fight for her constituents' common interests. "I certainly think I have been a voice for the people who don't have a strong voice in the legislature," she said.

Sen. Charles Albertson, D-Duplin, backs her. As chairman of the Agriculture, Environment and Natural Resources Committee she vice-chairs, Albertson said Kinnaird is highly involved, capable and admirable. "She has a passion for what she believes, and she brings a point of view to the committee that needs to be brought."

Kinnaird has been bringing her point of view to the General Assembly for eight years.

When Kinnaird, 72, was asked how long she planned to stay on as senator, she laughed and said, "That's up to my constituents." She's not looking for a higher office because she said her district keeps her busy and fulfilled enough.

Kinnaird said that while the women's movement changed her view on work, she cherishes her maternal role as well. "I have wonderful children and grandchildren. I'd never trade that for anything."

Kinnaird likes to garden, go to the movies and read in her spare time — when she has it. Representation is a 24-7 job, she said.

"When you've been in office for a while, you look back and think, 'What happened to the rest of my life?'"

Contact the State & National Editor at stntdesk@unc.edu.

WHITFIELD

FROM PAGE 3

spending money.

His jobs at fast food establishments and local grocery stores taught him early on the importance of hard work and an education neither of his parents were afforded.

Whitfield still stands behind his belief that these were the best lessons he learned from his parents.

He attended East Carolina University on a partial track scholarship, but still worked, and graduated with a history degree in 1969.

He then received a master's degree in education from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville and went to law school at N.C. Central University. After college, he served in the U.S. Air Force and completed a tour in Vietnam.

Whitfield, who spends his free time training for marathons, works as an attorney with the Durham firm Browne, Flebotte, Wilson &

Horn, PLLC and is a member of the Homestead Heights Baptist Church in Durham.

Whitfield was tapped to run against Kinnaird after the original Republican candidate, Kim James, withdrew for family reasons. He said he hopes to bring about a change in local politics.

Whitfield said he feels strongly about supporting issues such as an amendment to the N.C. Constitution banning same-sex marriage.

He also plans to improve the economy by lowering taxes for residents and businesses and is against a regional rail system that has been proposed for the Triangle.

"(There is) not enough environmental impact to be worth the cost of the light rail system," he said.

Whitfield proposed alternatives to the regional rail system, high traffic and environmental distress caused by transportation.

"We can improve roads and offer incentives such as high-occupancy car lanes and incentives for people to ride buses," he said.

Another issue Whitfield addressed is liberal bias on college campuses. He has sponsored a seminar for professors and students on the issue and stresses that he is fighting for open campuses with free speech on both sides.

He also intends to propose a bill that penalizes any college or university that denies anyone free speech or any other constitutional right.

Doug Biddy, chairman of the Orange County Republican Party, said Whitfield, whom he has known for 20 years, is a fine candidate.

"He would be a fresh and credible state senator to represent this area based on what he stands for," Biddy said. "He certainly has the education and the background, which is a good trait that the public is looking for in state senators."

Contact the State & National Editor at stntdesk@unc.edu.

Fenhagen, 81, DTH board member

BY GREGG FOUND

STAFF WRITER

Many University graduates take their degrees and knowledge and use them in far-reaching parts of the globe.

F. Weston Fenhagen, a 1946 University graduate, certainly was one such alumnus. But after spending much of his career abroad, he decided his life of service would be right at home in Chapel Hill.

A memorial service Friday at Chapel of the Cross on East Franklin Street honored Fenhagen, who died Oct. 8 while serving on the board of directors for The Daily Tar Heel and who friends and family said always held UNC and Chapel Hill dear.

"He loved being in a university town," said his wife, Betsy Fenhagen. "It was icing on the cake to him after being away for so many years."

After graduating with a degree from the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, Fenhagen worked as a journalist in both France and Maryland. He then joined the U.S. Diplomatic Corps as a public affairs officer and spent the next 25 years of his life traveling the globe.

"We went to Tunisia, Morocco, the Ivory Coast, Congo and Malaysia, and we felt very lucky to be there," Betsy Fenhagen said. Being far from Chapel Hill didn't deter Fenhagen's interest in the Tar Heels. "He was always a Tar Heel fan," Betsy Fenhagen said. "In Congo, he would sit with a radio pressed to his ear at 2 a.m. so he could listen to the games."

Fenhagen's daughter, Caitlin, remembers him as a man who loved to travel with his family on trips such as an expedition to Namibia and Zimbabwe five years ago.

"We explored some remote areas of the country and were able to see a rare black rhino. We would never have been able to do it without his imagination," Caitlin Fenhagen said.

After his time overseas, Weston Fenhagen returned to Chapel Hill and worked as an editor of publications for UNC's General Alumni Association.

He also spent time visiting death row inmates and was a Guardian ad Litem for the county Department of Social Services, where he spent time with abused and neglected children and reported to the courts on their welfare. Betsy Fenhagen said he would help them with school and would regularly drive one child to visit his mother in jail. He would even use his basketball and football season tickets to take a child to a game.

Herb Bodman, Weston Fenhagen's college roommate, has memories that go back to "whooping it up" after a UNC-Navy football game in the '40s and working on The Daily Tar Heel together.

"He was on the sports staff and somehow recruited me to write about freshman football," Bodman said. "I gave him my story and he said, 'You know, this is freshman football, not varsity football. I made sure to shorten my story.'"

Fenhagen's legacy will live on through a scholarship in the journalism school created in his name by his friend George Brady.

Donations may be made in Fenhagen's name to People of Faith Against the Death Penalty at 110 W. Main St., Suite 2-G, in Carrboro.

Contact the City Editor at citydesk@unc.edu.

RESEARCH

FROM PAGE 3

nationally in cancer research, receives more than 75 percent of its funding from the National Institutes of Health. A variety of other federal funding agencies, including the Department of Defense and the American Cancer Society, also sponsor the center.

The center works with 515 staff members and 220 scientists from more than 25 departments across campus. It soon will expand by creating a new facility with $180 million the N.C. General Assembly awarded the center this summer.

"The center has grown tremendously over the past few years. It has grown in our mission and our ties to the University," said Barbara Rimer, deputy director of population sciences at the center. "The incorporation of new faculty members from other departments of the University has grown even stronger."

The Lineberger Center is different from other research centers at the University because it is the one place that brings in a multitude of faculty and research from all over the University, said Debbie Dibbert, director of external affairs.

"Cancer is more than just medicine," she said. "It incorporates research not just from medicine, but from chemical, economic and psychology departments."

The Lineberger Center also has new plans to increase clinical research efforts, Earp said.

"We hope to dramatically increase clinical research and thus double the number of patients that we currently have."

Doing so is necessary, he said, to provide more care for a disease that has the potential to affect anyone. "Almost everyone in the University community has had some kind of a brush with cancer," Earp said. "So our goal is to create one of the most comprehensive centers that provides the best cancer care and research."

Contact the University Editor at udesk@unc.edu.

CORRECTIONS

■ Due to an editing error, the Oct. 24 article "MLK facilitator divulges plans" misspelled the name of Durham consultant Gita Gulati-Partee.

To report corrections, contact Managing Editor Chris Coletta at c.coletta@email.unc.edu.

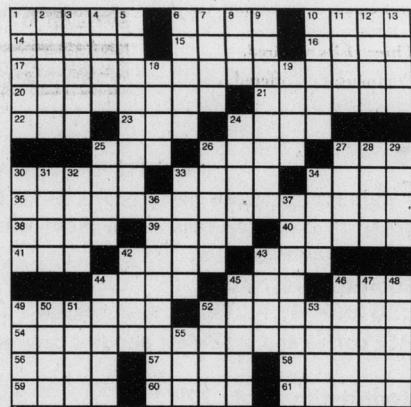

THE Daily Crossword

By Gerald R. Ferguson

©2004 Tribune Media Services, Inc. All rights reserved.

- ACROSS
1 Self-employment retirement plan
6 Jezebel's deity
10 Main aisle in St. Peter's
14 Host
15 Der ___ (Adenauer)
16 Arthurian lady
17 Trinket
20 Compelling influence
21 Pullover
22 Fast flyer, briefly
23 Novelist Levin
24 Prohibition grp.
25 Year in Madrid
26 Spanish rivers
27 Slangy affirmative
30 Capital of Belarus
33 Croat's neighbor
34 H.H. Munro
35 Small part of a whole
38 Turner and Clanton
39 Very dry
40 Impertinent
41 Part of NY's S.I.
42 Very dry, as champagne
43 Bar in Britain
44 Shoulder of the road
45 Big ___, CA
46 Old Gray Mare
49 Athens rival
52 On the whole
54 Compact pet?
56 BTU part

- 19 Hanoi holidays
24 Belushi biography
25 Adder cousins
26 Punch again
27 Jabbers
28 4-string guitars
29 Feel compassion for
30 DCCLi doubled
31 Vexes
32 Mr. Coward
33 Guitar stroke
34 Wound cover
36 Tells the tale
37 Like a loan shark
42 Greek letter
43 ___ Fiction
44 Limeys
45 REM situation
46 Low point
47 Parcel out
48 Valleys
49 Complacent
50 Knotty wood
51 Blue dye
52 Song for Sills
53 Words to Nanette
55 Coffee server

what do you wannabe?

THE HALLOWEEN ZONE
The place to shop for all your Halloween Needs!
NOW OPEN at NORTHGATE MALL
919-286-7857
Find the perfect costume to turn heads on Franklin Street
10% OFF offer expires 10/29/04

Explore Your Options!
Open House on Adult Learning and Part-Time Study
Wednesday, Oct. 27, 4-7 pm
Topics covered will include:
• How to earn UNC academic credit through part-time study
• Carolina Courses Online and other distance learning programs
• Admission and student aid information for part-time students
• Learning for enrichment and professional development (noncredit offerings)
• Opportunities for UNC faculty to teach nontraditional students.
Advisors and faculty will be on site to answer your questions. The Friday Center has ample free parking and is conveniently located near I-40. See our Web site, fridaycenter.unc.edu, for more information.
UNC THE WILLIAM AND IDA FRIDAY CENTER FOR CONTINUING EDUCATION

Since when does "fresh" mean "it just recently came out of the can"?
We're not happy with the state of affairs in our business. Somewhere along the way, the word FRESH has lost its meaning. But not at Armadillo Grill. We start with fresh fruits and vegetables. Everything is right from the garden, just like it's supposed to be!
ARMADILLO GRILL
A taste as big as Texas!
120 E. Main Street Carrboro, NC 929.4669
Duke University Bryan Center, Durham, NC 660.3937
493 Glenwood Avenue Raleigh, NC 546.0555

Career Corner
The Wendy P. & Dean E. Painter Jr. Career Center
For the week of Oct. 24-Oct. 31
219 Hanes Hall 919-962-6507 ucs@unc.edu
WALK-IN HOURS: Answers to career questions and resume reviews— Mon-Fri, 10—3p
PROGRAMS
CAREER CLINICS: Get an overview of the career decision-making process and advice regarding your major or career direction. Also, learn about career resources and have the opportunity to take an interest inventory. Mon and Tues—3:15-4:45p—239B Hanes Hall—Sign up at http://careers.unc.edu/career_explore.html
HOW TO FIND A JOB AFTER GRADUATION: Bring your laptop and learn how to search alumni and employer databases for job leads. Also, submit a resume for an on-campus interview through the UCS system. Tues. Oct. 26 3:00 239 Hanes
RESUME WORKSHOP: Construct a draft of your resume with help from a UCS counselor. Please bring your laptop. Tues. Oct. 26 4:00p 239B Hanes
HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR INTERVIEWING SKILLS: Learn how to interview effectively. Tues. Oct. 26 5:00 239B Hanes
PUBLIC RELATIONS CAREERS PANEL: Learn about careers in public relations from a panel of experienced professionals! Wed. Oct. 27 4:00p 239B Hanes
HOW TO FIND AN INTERNSHIP: Learn how to find internships and how to decide which one is best for you in this interactive session. Please bring your laptop! Tue. Oct. 19 2:00p 239B Hanes
LAW/LEGAL/LEGAL RESEARCH NETWORKING NIGHT: Network with local professionals in the legal sector and make great contacts. Brief introductions will be followed by mingling. Business casual attire is recommended. Please RSVP to <http://careers.unc.edu/events/register.html> Thurs. Oct. 28 5:30p 239B Hanes
LAW SCHOOL EXPLORATION DAY: Meet representatives from over 79 law schools across the country. Wed. Nov. 3 12:00-4:00p Great Hall
GOVERNMENT JOB FAIR: Meet representatives from government agencies and learn more about their opportunities. Tues. Nov. 09 10AM—3PM Durham Armory
EMPLOYER PRESENTATIONS
GlaxoSmithKline—Oct. 24—6-7p—207 Venable
IBM—Oct. 25—6-7p—239B Hanes
Ferguson Enterprises Inc.—Oct. 27—6-7p—239B Hanes
3 Clicks to Register http://careers.unc.edu Register with UCS Enter PID# and complete profile