

Jovian Irvin and Rebecca Frucht SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Irvin and Frucht listened to students' ideas about a Commencement speaker and a class gift. They have worked to explain the criteria involved in the selection of a speaker for the benefit of future classes. Their communication and outreach skills have been noticeably stronger than those of their predecessors.

Ensure that senior input is a substantial factor in the selection of the 2005 Commencement speaker.

Harvard professor Peter Gomes wasn't on the student list — but the officers have worked to make clear the realities of the selection process and to give students more knowledge.

Solicit senior opinion in the development of choices for the class of 2005's gift to the University.

Seniors were able to offer their ideas, which were condensed into a short list. A garden to honor the six UNC alumni who died in the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks will be a fine gift.

Recruit and work with a passionate group of senior marshals to plan and oversee senior events.

The general sentiment is that Irvin and Frucht have been effective leaders, and they freely attribute much of their success to hard-working, efficient marshals.

See to it that a bevy of exciting, well-attended senior events helps make the year special for those who are about to graduate.

Many events that have taken place this semester, especially the first Senior Night at He's Not Here and the recent Senior Black & White Ball, have been smashing successes.

Find and publicize ways for members of the Class of 2005 to give back to the community through service.

Senior class officials have promoted a number of service opportunities, including Habitat for Humanity and the officers' literacy project.

Jennifer Bushman

GPSF PRESIDENT

Although Bushman hasn't provided the impetus for any particularly outstanding achievements, she has overseen sure and steady improvement in the visibility and activity of the federation.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Make GPSF more relevant both to the students it represents and to other members of the community.

The GPSF Senate has become stronger, and the organization is improving its presence online.

Work to increase the ability of graduate and professional students to interact with one another.

Under Bushman's watch, a temporary site for the Graduate Student Center has been established on Franklin Street.

Address potential ways to improve the academic well-being of graduate and professional students.

The recently designated travel fund will assist these students in traveling to events and pursuing their studies off campus.

Work with the Teaching Assistant Advisory Task Force to improve the welfare of TAs.

There is much work to be done, but the recently announced TA stipend increase marks a strong step forward.

Find ways to connect the five separate judicial systems within UNC's graduate and professional schools.

Officials have instituted mandatory training for all judicial system staff members, among other significant changes.

Lindsay Strunk

CAA PRESIDENT

Although Will Keith was unable to complete his troubled term, Strunk admirably took over the operation and improved the group's communication with others. She has nudged CAA back toward the right track.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Establish a strong connection to students in receiving feedback about upcoming events.

Under Keith, the organization suffered a communication breakdown from which it is still recovering.

Work to guarantee success of Homecoming week events, especially the Homecoming concert.

After the Sister Hazel debacle, Strunk and company acted quickly and secured an exciting act: R&B balladeer John Legend.

Make efforts to improve communication with students regarding ticket distribution.

CAA has responded fairly well to questions and complaints about the distribution process, explaining the difficulties involved.

Handle the possibility of football ticket distribution on a case-to-case basis.

Although not distributing tickets for the N.C. State game was questionable, home games generally went off without a hitch.

Define goals that the organization can take on now that it is under different leadership.

Now that CAA has regained some credibility, the group needs to start thinking about its directives for the future.

Colin Scott

RHA PRESIDENT

Scott has proven to be successful in solidifying the Residence Hall Association's core, getting residents more involved and increasing the group's credibility in the eyes of UNC administrators.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Improve the association's outreach efforts and connect with student leaders and administrators.

Scott was involved in the selection of the vice chancellor for student affairs and has conferred with high-ranking officials.

Fill important positions and increase RHA members' involvement in the association's work.

As opposed to last semester, all governorships were filled, and the level of dedication within the association is high.

Get students' input regarding relevant topics, including new printing stations and smoking.

The group just finished administering an online survey gauging student opinion with more than 1,500 respondents.

Make it easier for students living on campus to learn about how to create residence hall programming.

RHA's Web site gives students access to a program grant form and teaches them about the association's role.

Help with voter registration efforts on campus to get more students involved in the democratic process.

Despite the facility-use policy controversy, RHA was part of a successful overall registration drive.

Student Congress

LED BY CHARLIE ANDERSON

Congress has some major in-house issues to deal with, but it has done a good job of examining the Student Code and trying to improve its language. The group has real potential that it has yet to reach.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Address concerns about flaws and discrepancies that exist in the Student Code.

Congress has been working hard to improve the Code's language regarding important aspects of the student elections process.

Ensure that funding for student organizations is allocated in a fair, objective manner.

Thanks to an effective Finance Committee, Congress has been fulfilling this core responsibility.

Take on issues and legislation that are of particular importance to the student body.

Congress occasionally has wasted some of its time with debate having to do with needless symbolic gestures.

Maintain as high a level of efficiency as possible during Student Congress meetings.

For the sake of productivity, members need to streamline debate to shorten meetings and to tackle more subjects.

Compel representatives to treat each other with respect and to reach out more to their constituents.

Anderson has made noticeable efforts to promote mutual respect among members and to get everyone on the same page.
