Felton comes through in end

BY BRIAN MACPHERSON

COLLEGE PARK, Md. - He had Jawad Williams, who had hit a 3-pointer from the same spot on the court only seconds earlier, spinning off a ball screen at the top of

He also had Sean May establishing position on the edge of the lane, and Melvin Scott and David Noel were looking for the ball on his right along the perimeter. But at this moment, in this game, the ball in Raymond Felton's hands wasn't going anywhere but in the basket.

Eighteen days after his momentary indecision in the final seconds of a critical road game against Duke prevented the Tar Heels from taking any final shot at all, Felton took matters into his own hands and scored the game-winning points with 18.9

With the score tied at 63 after very confident in my shot lately, these last couple of games, so I just stepped up and took a big shot. And I felt very confident about it."

After Blue Devil guard Jessica

Foley missed a 3-pointer, UNC guard La'Tangela Atkinson corralled the rebound and passed it to Latta, who was fouled by Smith.

seconds remaining in Sunday's game against Maryland.

"The drive was open — I had a free lane to the basket," Felton said. "Sean did a good job of sealing his man off, and he couldn't get to me to block my shot or make an attempt to get to my shot.

The entire North Carolina team, Coach Roy Williams included, had emphatically refused to pin the blame on Felton for the disappointing loss in Durham, even though the point guard had appeared to have an opening to drive to the bas-ket on the final possession — but instead picked up his dribble. "Raymond took a lot of grief after the Duke game for not try-ing to make a play when he had an opening in front of him, and I told him at that time it wasn't his fault," Roy Williams said. "It was partly my fault, the staff's fault, the players' fault, the guys that didn't play.

And when Felton lifted the Tar Heels to victory with his decisive drive to the basket, he seemed to be making a statement to any critics who still believed his failure to act in Durham cost UNC the game.

But Felton didn't see it that way. "It was a big shot, OK?" he said. "That's it. A big shot. I don't worry about that Duke game. That's over-

But even Sunday's game wasn't over when Felton gave the Tar Heels a two-point lead — after all, the Terrapins had plenty of time left to attempt the final shot. Guard John Gilchrist dribbled to the baseline, but his drive ended abruptly as he found himself trapped by David Noel and Felton. And when Gilchrist tried to split the defenders with a pass to Mike

Jones behind the arc, Felton swatted the ball out of bounds.

"Anything could have haphave stepped out of bounds, he could have stepped out of bounds, he could have thrown it away. I got a hand up and knocked the ball out of bounds, but if he had gotten the pass out, hopefully one of our teammates would have went over and stolen the ball."

And when Sean May's rejection of ones' final shot sealed the victory, Felton had proven without question that he could carry his team to a last-second victory in hostile territory.

"He's a basketball player," Noel said. "He knows you have to have a short-term memory in basketball. He definitely just took over for us and made a big shot at the end."

"If we play with the intensity we had in the second half, I'm sure we can play with any team in the country, but you have to play for 40

After Maryland briefly tied the score at 65, the Tar Heels pulled back ahead by eight, but the Terrapins hit three straight 3-pointers to take a one-point

"We were just talking about it — last year's team would've gotten rattled," said May, who continued his recent stellar play with 22 points and 11 rebounds. "It was the same thing; we're up 10, now they're up two, and how does that happen? But we never got into that we knew we were going to win this game. ... This team was just able to play with some poise."

North Carolina responded with a Jawad Williams 3-pointer off a kick-out by Raymond Felton, who finished with 10 points and 10 assists. Williams had promised his teammates he would make a big shot after missing the front end of a 1-and-1 earlier in the half and an open look a few possessions before his clutch shot.

"Like any player when you shoot the ball, I thought it was going in," said Williams, who contributed 21 points on 7-of-11 shooting. "I made an error earlier in the game, and I kept telling my teammates I was going to make up for it. I guess that was the play."

The Terrapins responded with a tip-in with 41.5 seconds left by Ekene Ibekwe. But Felton countered with his only basket of the second half by knifing through the lane and laying the ball in to put the Tar Heels up two — setting up May for the block that saved the win and North Carolina's onegame lead on Wake Forest in the ACC standings.
