Bush shows DeLay support | Senate mulls filibuster question

GALVESTON, Texas President Bush praised House Majority Leader Tom DeLay on Tuesday and gave him an Air Force One ride back to Washington as the administration worked to cool grumbling about the embattled exas congressman.
The White House denied that DeLay's appearance with Bush at a Social Security event here was a way for the president to give the House leader a political boost. But while the president has steadfastly backed DeLay, Tuesday's appearance took Bush's public show of support to a new level.

I appreciate the leadership of Congressman Tom DeLay in working on important issues that matter to the country," Bush said.

DeLay, an influential conservative on Capitol Hill, is facing questions about money used to pay for some of his foreign trips, about political fund raising for Texas elections and about his ties to a lobbyist, Jack Abramoff, who is under federal criminal investigation.

DeLay, who rode with the president in his limousine, on his Marine One helicopter and then on Air Force One for the return flight to Washington, has said he's willing to defend himself before the House ethics committee, but the panel is essentially shut down because of a deadlock over new rules imposed by Republicans.

Upon landing, and after a goodbye handshake at the bottom of the Air Force One steps, DeLay said the president's very public show of support for him Tuesday "felt very good."

"The president was very gracious," he said. "We feel very humbled by that kind of support."

DeLay said he did not know that strongly," McClellan said.

tickets for at least one overseas flight were charged to Abramoff's credit card — which would be a violation of ethics rules - saying, "I've always believed" it was paid for properly by a nonprofit group. "I didn't know that that went on," he said.

The Democratic National Committee asked why DeLay was being rewarded with a ride on the presidential jet.

"Jack Abramoff can't cut deals for first class seats on Air Force One," said DNC communications director Karen Finney. "This time the taxpayers are stuck paying the bill. It's time for George Bush to stop giving Tom DeLay a free ride."

Presidential spokesman Scott McClellan said DeLay was invited to the event because his district is near Galveston, although it doesn't touch it. Bush is supporting DeLay as "strongly as he ever has, which is

Court: Foreign rulings don't apply

WASHINGTON, D.C. - People convicted of crimes overseas still can own guns in the United States, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

In a 5-3 decision, the court ruled in favor of Gary Sherwood Small of Pennsylvania. The court reasoned that U.S. law, which prohibits felons who have been convicted in "any court" from owning guns, applies only to domestic crimes.

Justice Stephen G. Breyer, writing for the majority, said interpreting the law broadly to apply to for-eign convictions would be unfair to defendants because procedural protections are often less applied in international courts. If Congress intended foreign convictions to apply, they can rewrite the law to say so specifically, he wrote.

"We have no reason to believe that Congress considered the added enforcement advantages flowing from inclusion of foreign crimes, weighing them against, say, the potential unfairness of preventing those with inapt foreign convic-tions from possessing guns," Breyer

He was joined by Justices Stevens, O'Connor, Souter and Ginsburg.

In a dissent, Justice Clarence Thomas argued that Congress intended for foreign convictions to apply. "Any" court literally means any court, he wrote.

"Read naturally, the word 'any' has an expansive meaning, that is, 'one or some indiscriminately of whatever kind," Thomas said. He was joined by Justices Scalia and Kennedy.

Small had answered "no" to the felony conviction question on a fed-eral form when he bought a hand-gun in 1998, a few days after he was paroled from a Japanese prison for violating Japan's weapons laws.

He was indicted in 2000 for lving on the form and for illegally owning two pistols and 335 rounds of ammunition. He later entered a conditional guilty plea pending the outcome of this case.

The Bush administration had asked the court to apply the statute to foreign convictions.

The ruling, which was divided mostly along ideological lines, created a bit of an anomalous result for the conservatives Scalia and Thomas, who generally oppose the use of international law to support decisions interpreting the Constitution.

Their dissent embraced the notion that foreign law should be incorporated more deeply into the U.S. court system, with Thomas calling it wrong that the majority opinion effectively required Congress to be specific anytime it wanted foreign law to apply.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist on Tuesday rejected compromise offers that would allow minority Democrats to continue to block judicial nominees, saying all of President Bush's past and future court choices deserve confirma-tion votes from the GOP-controlled Senate.

"At the end of the day, one will be left standing ... the Constitution, which allows up-or-down votes, or the filibuster," Frist said.

Democrats blocked 10 of Bush's appellate court choices through filibuster threats, which means those nominees would have to get 60 votes before they could be confirmed to lifetime seats on the nation's second-highest court. They have threatened to block again the seven that Bush renominated this year, as well as future ones they consider outside the mainstream.

Republicans in turn have threatened to use their majority to change senatorial rules to require a simple majority vote for confirmation, in part because they fear a Democratic blockade could affect a Supreme Court vacancy if a high court seat opens in Bush's second

To avoid that showdown, Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid said Tuesday he had offered Frist a compromise. The Nevada Democrat refused to give full details but said part of that compromise would require Republicans to back away from attempting to ban judicial filibusters.

"I want to emphasize that any potential compromise is contingent on a commitment that the nuclear option will not be exercised in any form during this Congress," said Reid.

Democratic congressional sources said Reid laid out the compromise for party members at a closed door meeting Tuesday. It includes allowing confirma-tion votes for three nominees for the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals — Richard Griffin, David McKeague and Susan Neilson

– in exchange for Henry Saad's nomination to that court being withdrawn. Democrats also would not block confirmation of one of the four remaining filibustered nominees: Priscilla Owen, Janice Rogers Brown, William Myers and William Pryor, although it is not clear which one would be chosen for confirmation.

Reid also called for giving senators more power over appointment of judges from their state as well as up of former senators, to recommend improvements in the confirmation process. But Frist, earlier in the day, said he would not accept any deal that keeps his Republican majority from confirming judicial nominees that the Senate Judiciary Committee has approved.

"My goal is to have fair up-and-down votes," Frist said. "Are we going to shift from that principle?

The answer to that is no."

Frist also would not discuss specifics, but said he would not advocate the withdrawal of any judicial nominee and would continue to insist they all get confirmation votes. That would mean people in the past as well as the future," Frist said.

Frist and Reid both acknowledge they are constantly negoti-ating, trying to find a solution in which the Senate does not have a showdown.

Republicans could eliminate judicial filibusters by majority vote, and Democrats concede Frist may be only one or two votes shy of the necessary total.
