Out-of-towners Badger UNC supporters during weekend

BY CLINT JOHNSON

On Saturday afternoon, the Carolina Inn was host to a pre-game "huddle" complete with cheerleaders, a bluegrass band and trays of eastern North Carolina barbecue pork.

Almost 500 fans were there all of them dressed in red.

This was the "Badger Huddle," a pep rally for Wisconsin alumni

We're a bunch of nutcases — we go where they go," says Wendi Jaeck, a Badger fan who resides in

"We love our football, and win or lose, we just support them.'

Some fans were local, but most traveled across the country to see their team play the Tar Heels. Many of the fans came from Madison, home of the University of Wisconsin.

"It's like a brotherhood with us," fan Patti Kendall says. "If you see someone with a Badger shirt on, they're your friend forever."

Kendall made the trip from Madison and has been going to away games for the better part of seven years.
But these Wisconsinites brought more than support. Kegs of beer and trays of bratwurst were set up alongside the barbecue.

Also, a few Badger fans decided to wear the famous "cheese hat" a triangular tribute to the state's dairy prowess.

The Wisconsin Alumni Association also organized an "Alumni Tour" leading up to Saturday's game. The tour brought about 200 fans from Georgia, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Illinois and North Carolina.

"It gives everyone a chance to see friends and classmates, have a few beers, and get all fired up for the game," says Paula Bonner, president and CEO of the Wisconsin Alumni Association.

Jennifer Englander, the founder of the Wisconsin Alumni Association n New Orleans, says the growth of he relatively new group halted as a result of Hurricane Katrina.

"It goes by the wayside for a little while," Englander says about the association. "You've just got to hope that everyone's OK."

Englander moved to Cary before the hurricane hit and will be returning home soon.

"Life goes on wherever you end up," Englander says.

Robert Esser, a 1949 Wisconsin graduate, came with his wife, Mary, and two of their friends.

"Our friends talked us into coming, and we're glad we did. This will have been a good trip irregardless (of the outcome)," Esser says.

One family estimated the trip from Wisconsin cost them $1,500 All of the families say they thought the cost was worth it.

Inside the Carolina Inn, the bar was packed with dozens of Wisconsin fans. In the middle of all this were about ten light blue shirts.

"I've never seen (this place) like this. I was shocked," said Terry Crumpler, a Carolina fan from Winston-Salem. "All the Carolina fans are looking at each other, like, What's going on?"

Crumpler says he won't return to the "Non-Carolina Inn" until they change their policy of allowing vis-iting fans to dominate the grounds on game day.

As the rally wound down, mascot Bucky Badger, a group of Wisconsin cheerleaders and Bonner led the crowd in a rendition of the alma mater.

Playful taunts from passing groups of Carolina fans could be heard then and other times throughout the event.

Baker did not fare much better than his backfield, completing 16 of 37 passes. The quarterback also gave Tar Heel fans a scare when he could not get up after a hit by UW linebacker LaMarr Watkins early in the fourth quarter.

Baker missed a play, as backup
QB Joey Bozich took his first-career snap under center, but the senior quickly returned to the field despite being hobbled by bruised ribs.

"I couldn't breathe at all for about a minute out there," Baker said. "And then the ribs hurt. Then, I got hit twice more after that, and that made it feel a little bit worse."

The offense was also hobbled by a couple of crucial incompletions. The first came early in the second quarter — with the Tar Heels facing a third-and-long from the Wisconsin 35. Baker dropped back and dropped a perfect throw into the hands of receiver Jesse Holley, who had reached the end zone after running a post route. The pass fell through the junior's hands and hit the blue-and-white grass.

Later, fellow receiver Wallace Wright foiled another opportu-nity, an incompletion that essentially assured a Badger victory. With UNC trailing by 11 and facing a fourth-and-one with five minutes to play, Baker found Wright wide open in the flat. Though the pass was low, Wright could not secure the football.

You have to make plays," head coach John Bunting said of his receiving corps. "I've been thinking that we have an elite group in this ACC, and to date we're not making enough plays with our wideouts."

The Badger offense — deemed "bludgeon ball" by Bunting earlier last week — methodically handed the ball to star back Brian Calhoun. The junior tallied 171 yards on the ground, 40 of which came on two consecutive fourth-quarter plays.

The two big runs left the Badgers, who led 7-3, needing 18 yards to extend their lead to 11. And four plays later, Calhoun found a hole on the right side of the field stretching to the end zone, giv-ing Wisconsin its first points since an eight-yard Calhoun touchdown run late in the first quarter.

And it could get even worse for the Tar Heels, as Bunting announced Sunday that starting linebacker Doug Justice likely will be out for the year with a broken fifth metatarsal in his right foot.

But despite the defeat, the injury and Calhoun's impressive yardage total, the defense kept the team in the game, a rare sight after UNC's well-documented defensive woes of the past three years.

"We stopped that run," said tack-le Kyndraus Guy. "We played good ball. What they have, 60 points average a game? We held them to 14. That's ... good right now. We're loving that."

But heading into a crucial showdown next weekend at N.C. State, the Tar Heels would love a victory even more - and desperately need

PENALTIES

I've got two great kids that are out there that are holding and kicking," Bunting said with a chuckle. "I think they went out there and thought they had all day like it was in practice

— there's no clock. We had plenty of time to get it away and they just went out there to let the clock run down, and nobody ever saw the clock."

North Carolina wasn't the only team shooting itself in the foot Saturday as the Badgers got flagged for eight penalties for 74 yards. "We hurt ourselves," said

Wisconsin Coach Barry Alvarez. "We took points off the board. There was a foolish penalty with the hold down the field. It took a first down away ... (and we had) a third down conversion taken away after the ball. Two clips in the second half. A lot of mistakes. A lot of penalties."

UNC will need to find a solution to its penalty woes this week if it wants to score against the top-ranked N.C. State defense next weekend.
"I mean, all it is is we've just got to stay consistent," Edwards said. "We just got to eliminate penalties and make plays. That's all the game is — is just making plays. And who-ever makes plays at the end usually comes out winning."
