CHASE hosts basketball clinic

BY COURTNEY LEIGH MILLER

Twenty-seven people showed up to play wheelchair basketball Monday night. Only six of them actually were physically disabled.
Chapel Hill Adaptive Sports

Experience hosted a wheelchair basketball clinic Monday in Woollen Gym for both disabled and nondisabled members of the community.

Junior Lindsey Green and senior Tara Thananetapon said they founded CHASE at the end of last year because there were no disability programs available on

"It's something that people can really get involved in to draw more people in who don't know much about adaptive sports," said Thananetapon, an exercise and sport science major.

Thananetapon and Green went to Dr. Diane Groff, a professor of exercise and sport science, with the idea to start a group that would promote physical disability awareness through adaptive sports and recreation.

What we hope to do is have a variety of activities ... expose people with and without disabilities to adaptive sports," Groff

The Wake Wheelers Wheelchair Basketball team was on hand to teach those who never had played

J. Michael Atkins, of Robeson County, and three Wake Wheelers helped the nondisabled participants in the clinic understand the rules of the sport and how it

"I've been in this area in a chair for longer than anyone in this group of guys that came tonight," said Atkins, who has been playing wheelchair basketball on a team since 1992.

There was no type of adaptive sports program in this area," he said. "For years I've been beating on the doors of Duke, N.C. State and UNC for gym time, any type of assistance or help."

Senior Chris Ellis, a communications studies major, was among the students without disabilities who never had played wheelchair basketball before.

"I'm pretty bad at able-bodied basketball," Ellis joked a few minutes before rolling a borrowed wheelchair behind the three-point line for the first time and shoot-

Students without disabilities said the experience helped them not to take their physical abilities for granted.

"It's a great opportunity to appreciate how lucky we are to have bodies that do such amazing things and understand what it's like not to be so lucky," said sophomore Ben Scandella, from

CHASE has future plans for other activities, including a showing of "Murderball," a docu mentary showcasing quad rugby, Dec. 2 and Dec. 3 in the Student

To learn more about CHASE, go to www.unc.edu/chase.

> Contact the University Editor at udesk@unc.edu.

Student council kicks off meetings

Designed as way to unite campus

BY KATIE HOFFMANN

The Top of Lenoir was a virtual who's who of campus leaders Monday night.

More than 20 student leaders came together to hold the first meeting of the Student Organization Council — an umbrella group for campus leaders to discuss University issues.

The group is a collaboration between Don Luse, director of the Student Union, Virginia Carson, director of the Campus Y and Ryan Tuck, editor-in-chief of The Daily

"I think it's a great opportunity to press pause and ask, 'What can we do?" Tuck said.

Student leaders stressed the need to coordinate communications between organizations, highlighting the fragmented Hurricane Katrina relief effort as an example of the missing link between cam-trying to do a Katrina relief effort," said Bobby Whisnant, senior class president. "But there was no organization like this to go to."

Students also emphasized the need to coordinate events with other groups and to try to avoid conflicts of events.

"It's not that campus groups aren't doing things," said KaDarra Lowe, chairwoman of the UNC chapter of the National Pan-Hellenic Council. "We're all doing the same things, we just don't know about them.'

This communication problem soon will be addressed by a new aggregate campus calendar.

Using new software called Mambo, each student organization's calendar will be able to feed directly into SLICE - the Student Life

Integrated Calendar of Events.

"It's your slice of life at UNC," said Mark Laabs, Student Body President Seth Dearmin's chief of Laabs said that the program-ming is being finalized and that everything is almost in place for student organizations to use the technology.

"Literally, in the next couple of pus groups.

"Literally, in the next couple of days, I should have confirmation of

30 Lima's nation 32 Flatfoot

41 Side issue

33 Remote target?
34 Helpful one's request
35 Get tough
37 Favorite
38 Thole inserts
39 Zion National Park's

After confirmation, he said it should be about one week until organizations are able to use the Web site. Laabs said he would help members ease into the transition at the council's next monthly meeting. Members also said they hoped the next meeting will include representatives from more groups.

"By virtue of representing the largest student organizations on campus, we aren't representing all the 500 student organizations Laabs said.

But Tuck said many organizations who were invited did not attend, including the Young Democrats, College Republicans, Sangam, CHispA and Campus Crusade

The council also will accept applications for five general mem-ber spots for students who are involved on campus but not necessarily a major leader in one group.

"I think it would be good for up-and-coming students and would give us an outside perspective," Dearmin said.

> Contact the University Editor at udesk@unc.edu.

Forum addresses war in Iraq

BY ERIN FRANCE

About 650 people attended a panel discussion Monday on the war in Iraq, sponsored by the Orange County Democratic Party. The forum was moderated by

Jack Sanders, chairman of the Orange County Democratic Party, and fea-tured U.S. Rep. David Price D-N.C., and Bruce Jentleson, a professor of public policy and political

Rep. David Price spoke to a large crowd about the war in Iraq.

University.
"I think it's a shared consensus here to say 'No,' to stay the course (of the war), Jentleson said. Some in the crowd affirmed this science at Duke

statement by waving green papers supplied by the OCDP Jentleson said the papers

- red sheets showed disapproval allowed the crowd to express themselves and participate.

"It also reduced interruptions," he said.

Tom Henkel, the treasurer of the OCDP, said the papers contributed to a free exchange of ideas between the audience and the panelists.

He said he was pleased with the turnout and the effect it could have on Price. "I think our congressman is getting educated. There was discussion among panel members about how and when U.S. troops should pull out of Iraq and whether the upcoming Iraqi constitution will solve any problems.

Jentleson said he advocates a time frame instead of a fixed schedule for flexibility in handling unforeseen situations.

But Price advocates holding President Bush to a fixed schedule for leaving Iraq. "The benchmark idea is a way of challenging the

Ray McGovern, a former CIA analyst, said the president would not adhere to a timetable. "He thumbs his nose at things like benchmarks.

He added that the Democratic Party needs strong leaders, a state-ment that was met with the most green paper, applause and whistles of any other statement.

However, Jentleson said after the debate he thinks Price did an excellent job answering questions.

"He conveyed to people that his opinions are heartfelt too," he Price was asked in an audience-submitted question whether he would support a bill in the U.S. House to pull troops out of Iraq by the end of 2006 He said the bill only would support the American troops and did not mention any help for the Iraq There's a narrow perspective

> Contact the State & National Editor at stntdesk@unc.edu.

THE Daily Crossword By Arlan & Linda Bushman

state 69 Scratching (out) 70 Steadfast 71 Turn down

73 Spotted

DOWN

Luste

72 Landlord's revenues

Irv or Ben Sound Slow-moving mammal Intrepid Escutcheon flaw

Overgrown Map within a map "Star Wars" genre

ACROSS

Liquid asset Seventh heaven Quahog Wield the scepter

10 Quahog 14 Wield the sc 15 Noon event

16 Luminous ring 17 Olfactory prod 18 Davis of filmdom 19 Tidbit

20 Be impartial 23 J.D. Rockefeller's 1870

company 24 Sharp point 25 Hot tub

28 Freebie

31 One in a cast

40 Sink or swim?
42 Trick's partner?
43 Approve
44 Be impartial
47 "L.A. Law" actress Susan

48 Awards teleca figure 49 O'Neal of bas-ketball

ketball 51 Shatner novel "__ War"

52 Expel Debonair

60 Be impartial 64 Out-of-control 66 Slender candle 67 Long duration 68 Skunk River

Smart and fashionable What's in now Schooner fill Lady of the house Secluded location 22 In order

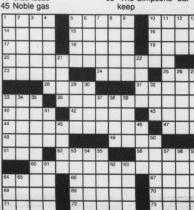

(C)2005 Tribune Media Services, Inc. All rights reserved 26 Aplomb 27 Pretentious 29 Portion (out)

46 Maiden 50 Hushes 53 Out-and-out 54 Financial interest 55 Gimme putt 57 Revere 58 Meeting location 59 Ruhr city 61 Green light 62 Superman's alias

62 Superman's alias

63 Joule fractions

64 Assistance 65 "The Simpsons" bar

www.common-music.com UNC Homecoming Concert

One ticket per UNC Student OneCard with a maximum of two UNC Student

Tickets available for purchase at:

OneCards per student.

Carolina Union Box Office.

M-F, 10am-5pm, 962-1449

Memorial Hall Box Office,

Activities Board.

M-F, 10am to 6pm, 843-3333

Presented by the Carolina Athletic Association and the Carolina Union

Sunday, October 30

Tickets on Sale

UNC Student $15

reserved seating

October 11

Funded at least in part by Student Fees which were appropriated and dispersed by the Student Gover

8pm • Memorial Hall

1)

CARMAX NOW HIRING

Start your Career at CarMax as a... STRATEGY ANALYST

CarMax is a FORTUNE 500 company and one of the FORTUNE 2005 "100 Best Companies to Work For." We have opportunities for STRATEGY ANALYSTS at our offices in Richmond, VA and Atlanta, GA. You will work with senior executives to:

Explore questions facing a unique business concept

Drive improvements in everyday operations

· Develop the skills you need to run a successful company

Maintain a healthy balance between work and personal life

Positions are available in the following areas:

Business Operations

Credit & Financial Strategy

Expansion Planning

Inventory Management

 Marketing Insights Strategic Planning

For more information, visit:

carmax.com[®] Resume Deadline: FRIDAY, OCTOBER 12TH Drop your resume with the Career Services Online System

The way car buying

We promote a drug-free workplace. EOE.

