SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Find a Senior Class Speaker to complement Commencement celebrations with a student-oriented speaker.	Bobby and Jenny have yet to firm up an agreement with any performers or speakers, but they have been in contact with the Office of the Provost and others to secure funding.
Facilitate the gift selection process and raise the needed funds to allow the senior class to leave its mark on campus.	The gift options were disappointing this year, with a welcoming sign being selected. In addition, Bobby and Jenny have a long way to go before they have the money to build it.
Provide opportunities for the Class of 2006 to give back to the community through service to others.	With the Pathfinders program, the week of service and hurricane relief efforts, the class officers have been very active and have a whole list of service projects for next semester.
Organize a variety of social outings and events that seniors will find interesting and attend.	Bobby and Jenny's social and special projects committee have thrown bar nights, a Halloween party and Fall Cocktail, giving seniors a wide array of social events to choose from.
Have a specific plan for next semester's activities, and get on the ball about raising money for all of this semester's projects.	The class officers have things such as Last Blast and book drives for needy kids planned. But Bobby and Jenny need to start finding money for a speaker and the class gift.

Overall Average:

Bobby and Jenny have organized more events than their recent predecessors. But the class gift was a bit of a disappointment, and it's still not clear how it will be funded. The class officers need to keep up the good work with social and service events while they try to make progress with a senior class speaker.

Mike Brady

GPSF PRESIDENT

The Graduate and Professional Student Federation is hard-pressed to deal with setbacks in tuition, the need to raise stipends and to better child care options. Brady doesn't seem to have the initiative for the tasks.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Push for a child care center that graduate students readily can use as an alternative to expensive services.	There needs to be a solution that can be implemented sooner than making space at Carolina North.
Find advocates for graduate student interests and concerns on the Board of Trustees.	Brady's appearance before the BOT was a good effort, but it still looks like graduate students will get the shaft.
Work with undergraduate student officials to push for consideration of graduate students in tuition talks.	The GPSF and student government seem to have different priorities, and graduates are unlikely to get much help from that quarter.
Push for graduate students to be able to buy spousal tickets to basketball games.	The GPSF and CAA have been able to come together to start a trial program of allowing spousal tickets.
Get graduate students more involved in campus affairs so that they can represent their own interests.	With only one graduate running for a dozen open seats in Student Congress, graduate students just aren't getting integrated.

Justin Johnson

CAA PRESIDENT

Justin Johnson's tenure as CAA president has been exceptional thus far, marred only by CAA taking a surprisingly large number of tickets for the anything but Common Homecoming Concert.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Run a smooth distribution for men's basketball tickets.	Johnson has, by most accounts, had well-run ticket distributions that have been relatively free of abuse.
Address charges that the group keeps too many tickets from the student pool for itself.	Johnson collaborated with Student Congress to reduce the number of tickets CAA receives from 140 to 86.
Stay in touch with the student body to keep it informed about ticket opportunities.	Constant letters to the editor and taking out ads in the DTH are good additions to the publicity on the CAA listserv.
Graduate students have been vocal about wanting basketball tickets to sit with their spouses.	CAA has begun a trial of having about 100 tickets that can be purchased for some games for student ticket-holders' spouses.
Increase spectator participation in sporting events other than men's basketball and football.	Carolina Fever membership has increased by 200 people this year, resulting in higher turnout at non revenue-generating events.

Chasity Wilson

RHA PRESIDENT

Residence Hall Association President Chasity Wilson has been doing a good job of strengthening RHA's current programs but could be more innovative and a stronger advocate for students in campuswide issues.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Generate interest in RHA programming while not wasting student fees.	Activities requests are up from last year, and events with low attendance last year — such as Traditions Night — were cancelled.
Fill important positions and increase RHA members' involvement in the association's work.	All of the governorships are currently filled, even with communities such as Cobb that have been disrupted by construction.
Coordinate worthwhile and interesting activities for residents to participate in.	RHA co-sponsored events at Live8, Race Relations Week, Culture in the Quad and World AIDS Day.
Keep Cobb and Odum residents from being shorted the RHA services that everyone else gets.	Cobb and Odum communities have enhancements, and there were programs in Baity Hill when undergraduates were there.
Advocate for student concerns in the areas over which RHA holds any kind of influence.	While RHA members serve on a number of committees, Chasity could take a higher-profile stance on more ongoing issues.

Student Congress

LED BY LUKE FARLEY

With a lackluster student body president, Speaker of Student Congress Luke Farley stands alone as the de facto leader among the three branches. Also, the whole body of Congress has stayed active and productive.

ISSUES

COMMENTS

Address concerns about flaws and discrepancies that exist in the Student Code.	Congress is again revising portions of the Code — particularly the part pertaining to elections. Hopefully it'll be improved.
Get active representatives to fill all of the Congress seats for every district.	Undergraduate seats are filled, and members that weren't active have resigned. Graduate students have a number of empty seats.
Maintain as high a level of efficiency as possible during Student Congress meetings.	Farley has been able to get Congress meetings over before 3 a.m. and largely avoid inefficiency, unlike last year.
Allocate money from student activity fees fairly among various student organizations.	Few complaints have come forward about appropriations, and there have been no overruns, such as with previous Congresses.
Lobby the General Assembly on behalf of UNC and the interests of the student body.	Farley and members of Congress lobbied legislators during the summer budget talks.
