But Sudoku is more than a fad, Gould says, and will remain after the initial hype fades. "When crosswords came out in the 1920s, they were a craze, and look, we still have them," he says. "I can't imagine Sudoku disappearing."

WOODWARD

All students should attend the event, no matter what their major, Roush said. "What Bob Woodward could talk about would be applicable to students in any major," he said. "He's got these incredible life experiences. He's covered some of the most important events in history in the last 25 years." To RSVP for the event, call 843-

7787 or e-mail kfbsrsvp@unc.edu. Overflow seating will be in nearby classrooms, where the speech will be viewed from a live video feed. Roush said he is excited for the speech, even though Woodward is speaking at the business school and not the journalism school. "As long as he's on campus and students can be exposed to him, I don't care if he's meeting in a bathroom."

be favored first in open campus recontracting, said Rick Bradley, assistant director of housing and residential education. "It limits upperclass students in terms of their options, but I think people are understanding that the upperclass students still have many choices available to them," he said. Bradley said those choices include Odum Village and Ram Village Apartments, a 917-bed complex opening this fall. About 200 students already have submitted applications for Ram Village, and the application will remain online until all vacancies are filled. Theme housing contracting also is open and will close Feb. 15, while same room recontracting kicks off March 21, followed by open campus recontracting on April 3. "I think the thing to keep in mind is that, of our total number of spaces on campus, only 2,500 are on North Campus," Hicks said. Bradley said the department is eliminating real time in the online recontracting application because students have experienced technical problems in accessing the online application. Student requests will be limited to residence halls and roommates, and they will no longer be able to request rooms or suitemates if moving to a new building. The housing department also is proposing a price increase for double-occupancy residence halls with air conditioning from $2,095 to $2,300 in an effort to keep the Ram Village prices lower. The proposed prices for those apartments are $2,825 for single-occupancy rooms per semester and $2,700 per person per semester for a shared bedroom. Bradley said housing officials decided on all changes after having a Residence Hall Association committee review the current process in November. "The committee came up with recommendations that were then presented to the complete RHA," he said. The Housing Advisory Board — composed of students and staff — voiced no specific concerns to Colin Reed, RHA vice president, said the organization mainly was concerned with this year's sophomores, because they are expecting past years' procedures. Students in the class of 2008 will be the only students never to reap the benefits of the upperclassmen priority in open campus recontracting because the changes occur as they become juniors. "It's just kind of a shock that they want to change how it's all been done," Reed said. Contact the University Editor at udesk@unc.edu.
