Puppies putting N.Y. on high alert?

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A Cortlandt, N.Y., woman advertised the adoption of four rat terrier pups by labeling them "terrorists" in a classified ad. Paula Young, director of Mount Vernon's animal shelter, ordered the two-week, three-line ad that reads, "Twin Rat Terrorists; 11 months, adorable, full of fun" in The Journal News after she saved the pups from euthanization in New York City last month.

Young said she was being honest in her description, as the dogs have fierce hunting instincts. Coming from a military family, Young said she did not think the word "terrorist" would offend anyone. Only one dog has been adopted thus far.

NOTED. Avril Lavigne issued a statement apologizing for her behavior with the paparazzi in response to reports that she spat at photographers in two different incidents last week.

However, the singer's apology indicated she "meant no offense" to her fans, not the paparazzi, she said.

Lavigne said "it's trying at best dealing with their insistent intrusions."

QUOTED. "A rock; there is something substantive about it."

— Little Rock, Ark., Mayor Jim Dailey on the capital city's new nickname, "The Rock."

Revealed Monday, the new nickname replaces the city's former moniker, "City of Roses."

Dailey said he wasn't concerned that the name would be confused with the former Alcatraz prison or the professional wrestler.
