Streaker — Sarasota's very own Big Foot

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

Who was that undressed man? That's the question startled hikers, bikers and horseback riders in Sarasota, Calif., are asking about a jogger seen streaking through an open space preserve wearing nothing but sneakers, glasses and a black tam hat. Although numerous park users have reported seeing the exhibitionist over the last year-and-a-half, rangers have been unable to identify and arrest him for exposing himself. By most accounts, the man is polite and does nothing other than run in the buff.

"He's frumpy. Plain. Not in good physical shape," said equestrian Sue Bowdoin, who spotted the naked man, middle-aged and sporting a pale paunch, while riding her horse. "It's not a pretty sight."

NOTED. Friends at the University of Connecticut took a cue from "Revenge of the Nerds" and started a fraternity called Lambda Lambda Lambda, the campus newspaper reported.

Lambda Lambda Lambda currently has 10 members, nine male and one female. They plan to rush this Friday and are expecting about 30 to participate.

QUOTED. "She yelped because getting tased hurts."

— Aaron de Bruyn, 26, who said he used a stun gun on his wife's 79-year-old grandmother and was arrested for domestic assault. When the grandmother refused to leave his house after an argument, de Bruyn said he shocked her on her shoulder as she sat on the living room couch. The grandmother was not injured.

Weekend Campus Roundup

Black leaders speak

Former members of the Black Panther Party and the Young Lords Organization of the 1960s and 1970s shared their experiences Saturday at the Sonja Haynes Stone Center.

The discussion marked the opening of a new exhibit that documents the histories of the groups with photographs, fliers, posters and other materials.

Time: 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Location: Hanes Arts Center Auditorium

Mock trial team advances

One of UNC's mock trial teams placed second in its division during a regional competition held at Furman University this weekend.

Forty-four teams competed in the event.

The team will advance to the National Championship Tournament in April.

ROTC tests out tactics

Members of UNC's Army ROTC participated in land navigation training Saturday.

The training allowed the cadets to apply tactics and maneuvers they have learned in a hands-on, practical experience.

Body image discussion

Author Leslie Goldman spoke to a group of students Sunday about her experiences in writing and researching for her novel "Locker Room Diaries."

The novel exposed the often desperate measures women take to achieve the "perfect" body.

In the presentation, titled "Body Image: The Naked Truth," Goldman used anecdotes and humor to emphasize the importance of maintaining a positive self-image.

The Legacy of Matthew Shepard

Judy Shepard

Great Hall, UNC-CH FPG Student Union
7:00 PM | January 30, 2007

On October 8, 1998, Judy and Dennis Shepard were awakened in the middle of the night in Saudi Arabia, where Dennis works, by a telephone call no parent should ever have to receive. What they heard changed their lives forever. Their eldest son, Matthew, was in a coma after having been brutally attacked—because he was gay. On October 12, Matthew passed away.

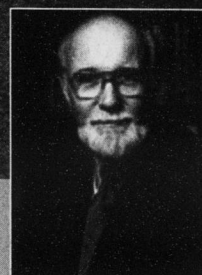

Judy Shepard is determined to use her grief over her son's death to make a difference—to do what she can to ensure that no other parent will have to endure what she has. She is now speaking to audiences nationwide about what they can do to make their schools and communities safer for everyone, regardless of their race, sex, religion, or sexual orientation.

Divine and Human Love in the Twelfth Century

DR. BERNARD MCGINN

Naomi Shenstone Donnelley Professor Emeritus
University of Chicago Divinity School

January 29, 2007
7:30 p.m.
Hanes Art Center 121
Free and open to the public

AND CULTURE with the
UNC Scholars Program

Supported by a grant from the John Templeton Foundation

Twelfth-century Europe witnessed a rich development of speculation on the nature of love, from the courtly love of medieval romance literature, through the bridal mysticism of the monks, to the thoughts of the scholastics on the metaphysics of love. Relating love of God and erotic love between men and women was the subject of striking new reflections. Among the most intriguing of these were the letters exchanged between Abelard and Heloise and the treatise of the Victorine canon Richard on The Four Degrees of Violent Charity. This lecture will consider aspects of the relation of divine and human love in twelfth-century thought, especially as seen in these works.
