

The Daily Tar Heel

VOLUME 114, ISSUE 147

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 2007

www.dailytarheel.com

TOBACCO ROAD RAGE

Tip-off: 9 p.m.

Location: Cameron Indoor Stadium, Durham

Broadcast: Raycom-Lincoln Financial, ESPN

NORTH CAROLINA (20-3, 6-2 IN THE ACC)
DUKE (18-5, 5-4)

SERIES HISTORY

- ▶ North Carolina leads all-time 125-96
- ▶ Duke leads 38-31 in games played in Cameron Indoor Stadium
- ▶ Mike Krzyzewski's Duke record vs. UNC: 31-32
- ▶ Roy Williams' UNC record vs. Duke: 2-4
- ▶ Duke has won 16 of the last 20 meetings

INSIDE:

- ▶ RIVALRY EXTENDS TO THE FIGHT AGAINST HUNGER
SEE PAGE 12
- ▶ A FULL-PAGE SPREAD ON TONIGHT'S GAME
SEE PAGE 13
- ▶ SOME UNC STUDENTS ROOT FOR THE BLUE DEVILS
SEE PAGE 15

ONLINE:

- ▶ A PREDICTION FROM OUR BASKETBALL BEAT WRITER
- ▶ CHECK TONIGHT FOR LIVE BLOGGING DURING THE HEATED SHOWDOWN

DTH/BETH ELY AND MELISSA WILKINSON
Duke sophomore David Talley (left) takes on his fraternal twin brother, Jon, a UNC economics major. The brothers are from Hillsborough.

DTH FILE/BRANDON SMITH
Students stormed Franklin Street and built and leaped over bonfires after the Tar Heels' win over Duke on March 6, 2005.

Town expects normal post-game festivities

Police don't plan to alter procedure

BY ALEX KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

A UNC basketball win always brings celebrating fans to Franklin Street. But when the win is against Duke, it brings fans and flames. Chapel Hill officials are preparing for the possibility of post-game antics on Franklin Street after the Carolina-Duke matchup today.

University students, the police and fire departments and downtown businesses all have different expectations of what might come with a Carolina victory. Officer Phil Smith, special events coordinator of the Chapel Hill Police Department, said the police and fire departments are predicting normal post-game behavior and do not have any special plans to prevent a repeat performance of last year's pyrotechnics. Both departments will be in correspondence with each other and will deploy personnel on the street to put out fires that are too large and could burn spectators. Besides this precaution, Smith said police and fire procedures will not change. Cars parked on Franklin Street should be moved as quickly as possible if UNC wins, Smith said. In the celebrations following a win in 2001 against Duke a car was flipped and others were damaged. Franklin Street establishments' managers and employees said

SEE FRANKLIN ST., PAGE 12

COUNTDOWN TO ELECTIONS:

6 DAYS

INSIDE: CANDIDATE PLATFORMS

See pages 10 and 11 for candidate goals and platform points

Kite files election suit over video

Elections board bars use of film

BY KATE SULLIVAN
STAFF WRITER

Student body president candidate Jon Kite filed a suit with the Student Supreme Court against the Board of Elections on Monday after the board ruled that he could not use a video that he made for campaign purposes. In the video, Kite interviews UNC officials and students about campus issues. The segments are edited to create a product that offers a satirical view of University politics. The video was modeled after episodes of "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart," Kite said. Jim Brewer, chairman of the elections board, said members of the board came to a unanimous decision to ban the video, ruling that it misrepresents election issues. "It's not the issues themselves," Brewer said. "Style makes the election issues misrepresented." He said the misrepresentations Candidate Jon Kite says he was not appropriately notified of the board's decision.

in Kite's video, created by splicing together interview clips, do not provide students with a clear understanding of the issues. Kite said Title VI of the Student Code requires that the board notify candidates in writing 24 hours after the decision is made. Kite's written notification came Monday — six days after the initial decision. But Brewer said the section Kite cites in his suit only applies to decisions made by the chairman, not to those made by the entire board. Brewer said he called Kite's campaign manager, Massie Minor, the day after the decision, which he considered official notification. Board officials met with Kite and his legal counsel Tuesday night to

SEE SUIT, PAGE 12

Edwards bases campaign in Southern Village

BY ALEXANDER TROWBRIDGE
STAFF WRITER

With Chapel Hill's John Edwards running for president, the location of the former U.S. senator's campaign headquarters is receiving mixed reviews. Edwards, whose high-profile candidacy focuses on eradicating poverty, has established his base in the upscale Southern Village. Business owners and workers in Southern Village have expressed excitement about having such a high-profile figure working in their community, though the location has raised a few eyebrows. Andrew Taylor, a political science professor at N.C. State University, said Edwards is running a strong campaign, but voters will take notice of his choice of an affluent campaign location. "People will see the juxtaposition and the contrast and that will be a problem for him," Taylor said. "He's always going to have to address it." Brad Crone, president of Campaign Connections, a Democratic consulting firm based in Raleigh, said that voters will not make much out of the issue and that the location will expose the campaign to a broad perspective of political ideologies. "While Chapel Hill may not represent a poor community, it does represent views that aren't inside the beltline," he said, referring to Washington, D.C. "It's middle America."

SEE EDWARDS, PAGE 12

DTH/COURTNEY POTTER
Robert Lyles, of Chatham County, washes a window, which reflects former U.S. Sen. John Edwards' headquarters at Southern Village.

online | dailytarheel.com

- ALL BUSINESS Kenan-Flagler Career Lab aims to help women succeed in business
- WE'RE ALL HUMAN Orange County celebrates Human Relations Month
- READYING FOR A FIGHT Democrats and Republicans set to spar over budget

state | page 4

FIRED UP

About 50 people gather in Tar Heel to protest the firing of undocumented immigrants working at the Smithfield hog processing plant.

features | page 8

LOVE-LY MEMORIES

Students, including the student body president and basketball player Wes Miller, talk about their best and worst Valentine's Days.

this day in history

FEB. 7, 1989 ...

About 12,000 students and 3,000 faculty members receive notification that they need a red measles vaccination shot after a statewide outbreak.

weather

Partly Cloudy
H 49, L 25

index

police log	2
calendar	2
games	7
sports	13
opinion	16