Her teammates responded by scoring eight runs in the sixth inning. The upperclassmen took over as junior Casey Testa and senior Anna Evans led the charge with two RBIs each in the inning.

UNC won the game 9-4. Half an hour later, the Eagles came out eager to even up the series. Sophomore pitcher Lisa Norris had other ideas, however, pitching a gem in a complete-game shutout. Boston College kept it close, with pitcher Taylor Peyton limiting the Tar Heels to only four hits and one run in a complete game of her own, while UNC sophomore Breanna Brown knocked in the only run.

After a long day, UNC escaped with consecutive wins numbers 23 and 24.

Sunday afternoon Norris returned to face BC and reaffirmed her place as the ace of the club with 10 straight innings of wicked pitching. For the second time in two days the Tar Heels appeared finished, then exposed their resiliency in a telling performance. Norris refused to lose her composure when in trouble, and would then dig her way out - giving up only one earned run on 11 hits.

"Honestly we don't even think about (the win streak). We're a tough team right now."

DONNA PAPA, COACH

"I do like being in tough situa-tions," Norris said. "I just kept my composure and everything. Just do my job, that's all I can ask for." Offensively, UNC could not catch a break as ball after ball was swallowed by BC's aggressive infield or caught at the back fence.

With its own back up against the fence, UNC fought back in the bottom of the seventh on a solo shot to center field by Evans and an RBI single from Norris. "I hadn't had good at-bats before. I got a great pitch and I wailed on it

I got a great pitch and 1 water of a I guess," Evans said. UNC was able to grab the victory, 3-2, in the 10th inning when Erin Dudley scored on a passed ball. Although 25 straight victories is school weath Caroling.

The Tar Heels did a pretty od job shutting down George good job snutting town though Washington's stars, but guard Sarah-Jo Lawrence went on a late scoring charge and led all scorers with 23 points before fouling out with 3:18 left in the game.
