Former chief of staff tapped for hog post

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

Former White House Chief of Staff John H. Sununu has a new title — hog wrangler.

Sununu and his wife, Nancy, recently were named to the honorary post of Hampton Falls' hog reeve, complete with a swearing-in ceremony and a badge. The post, which dates back to the 1700s, means the couple is responsible for rounding up any loose pigs in the New Hampshire town.

The title is usually given to an unsuspecting newcomer each year. The Sununus recently moved from Salem to Hampton Falls to be closer to relatives.

"Somebody had warned us," Sununu said. "We had some friends who had come to town earlier."

NOTED. Babloo Srivastava has spent the last 10 years in a northern Indian prison facing 32 charges, including murder and kidnapping. But that won't stop him from running in state elections.

Srivastava will run his campaign from prison as Uttar Pradesh, a northern Indian state infamous for crime and political violence, heads to the polls next month.

QUOTED. "He's taunting him — I swear he's taunting him."

—Shirley Exner, of Maine, on how a mouse stole her husband Bill's dentures. The couple found the dentures behind a hole in the wall.

Bill Exner said he has caught the mouse three times, and each time the mouse has escaped. Shirley Exner also said the mouse often comes out and stares at her husband.

Weekend Campus Roundup

Poverty boxout

As part of Poverty Awareness Week, the Campus Y held a boxout, where students slept in boxes to experience the life of the homeless.

The boxout, which started Thursday night, included a panel, moderated by Chapel Hill Mayor Kevin Foy.

The event, which lasted from 6 p.m. to about 8 a.m. Friday, also included free food, a showing of documentaries and music.

Mike Tarrant, co-coordinator of Poverty Awareness Week, said that about 200 people came by throughout the night.

There were 65 boxes, and at the candlelight vigil, there were more than 70 people standing in the Pit.

The week's goal was to educate students and community members about the poverty that exists in their own backyards.

Iron Chef competition

The Asian Students Association hosted an Iron Chef competition Sunday with bean sprouts as the secret ingredient.

The event — held in Union multipurpose room — pitted campus groups against each other to create the best dish.

Finance law workshop

Professors and students from UNC and Duke University law schools collaborated through a workshop devoted to banking and finance Friday in the UNC law school boardroom.

Attendees had lunch at the start of the noon event and heard a presentation from Frank Dobbins, professor of sociology at Harvard University.

The event was hosted by UNC's Center for Banking and Finance.
