DAILY DOSE

No buyers for mom milk

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A n Iowan has taken out a newspaper ad, trying to sell her surplus breast milk. Martha Heller, 22, took out an ad in The Gazette offering 100 ounces of her milk for $200 or the best offer. She has not yet found any takers but said she has received one prank call. Heller now donates to the University of Iowa's Mother's Milk Bank, but the 100 ounces of milk for sale was pumped before she went through screening.

NOTED. Gnomes and other creatures have overrun the Springfield, Ore., police station.

As part of a prank, somebody stole 75 lawn ornaments from around town and placed them meticulously on the lawn of one house.

Police have seized the figures, including porcelain geese, deer, frogs and gnomes.

QUOTED. "When everyone's singing your complaint, it's very cathartic. It's as if you have a lot of support for your complaint."

— Chicago resident Amy Levin, who participated in the international complaints-choir movement at the Museum of Contemporary Art.

Participants submitted complaints that were sung in four-part harmony.

POLICE LOG

■ Six people were arrested after throwing water balloons from the roof of the Cobb Parking Deck about 1:30 a.m. Saturday, according to University police reports.

Two of the suspects complied with a police officer's request to come down from the roof and were arrested on second-degree trespassing charges, reports state.

Four others refused the officer's request and were arrested on second-degree trespassing charges and resisting, delaying and obstructing charges, according to reports.

■ Jason Leven Graham, 30, was arrested on a misdemeanor charge of public urination at 12:15 a.m. Saturday, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

Graham, of 5639 Old Chapel Hill Road, was seen urinating behind the courthouse on East Franklin Street, reports state.

Graham was arrested at 179 E. Franklin St., issued a citation and released, reports state.

He is scheduled to appear Dec. 18 in Chapel Hill District Criminal Court, according to reports.

■ A Moog synthesizer was reported missing from Hill Hall at 3:20 p.m. Friday, according to University police reports.

Reports state that the synthesizer is valued at $10,000.

■ Someone broke into the trunk of a car parked on Ridge Road near UNC's School of Law and stole a camera, batteries, a credit card and $20 in cash, according to University police reports.

The property was valued at $520. The incident was reported at 8 a.m. Sunday, reports state.

■ Roy Sheppard Cox, 36, of Oak Ridge, was arrested at 6:30 p.m. Saturday on second-degree trespassing charges in Kenan Stadium, according to University police reports.

■ Someone broke the driver's side window in a car parked on Mason Farm Road. The incident was reported at 12:35 p.m. Sunday, according to University police reports.

Nothing was stolen from the car, reports state.

TAKE THE TRIP!

This psychedelic 1979 "farewell concert" explores the outrageous life of fictional rock star Cameron Seymour (alter ego of Cynthia Hopkins of Gloria Deluxe). Under CIA surveillance, on the eve of exile to Morocco and hilariously disconnected, this character sweeps audiences up into a raucous and hilarious blend of concert, spectacle and theater.
