DAILY DOSE

EMT driver nabbed for drunk IV-ing

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

An emergency medical technician fired for allegedly driving an ambulance while intoxicated recently appeared at a hearing requesting unemployment benefits.

Engman, formerly of the Midwest Ambulance Service of Iowa, was accused this summer of arriving to work two hours early, smelling of alcohol, then attempting to set up an intravenous fluid transfusion on himself. When questioned later by police, he allegedly said he set up the transfusion to eliminate some of the alcohol in his blood.

Engman testified that he didn't believe he was drunk when he arrived to work. Asked how much alcohol he had consumed, he said that he had "no idea" but that he had stopped drinking a few hours before reporting for work.

NOTED. A New York restaurant is offering a $25,000 dessert, which was declared the most expensive dessert in the world this week.

The Fırrozen Haute Chocolate is a mix of cocoa from 14 countries, milk and edible gold, topped with whipped cream and shavings from a truffle. It is served in a goblet decorated with a band of gold and 1 carat of diamonds and is served with a golden spoon diners can take home.
