DAILY DOSE

They're riding on 20s — as in dollars

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

Tricked out from nose to tail with images of $100 bills, New Orleans resident Jamaine Anderson's money car got mo' cash for this weekend's Bayou Classic. Now it has money on the rims, too.

It's part of an unofficial sideshow, the Times-Picayune reported, to the perennial football game between Southern University and Grambling State held Saturday — a parade of flamboyant cars that crawls down Canal Street in the French Quarter.

They are known as decal cars or sticker cars, and they have become a regional symbol of New Orleans, where the technique got its start.

Among the cars this year were a Lay's potato chip car and a 1985 Caprice Classic shrink-wrapped with Tony the Tiger and Frosted Flakes.

NOTED. Carrboro police were sent out to an animal call last week, which was reported as a possible injured duck on or close to a pond off N.C. 54.

But what the officer found was far from a wounded duck.

The officer's own words, in the police report: "Negative on injury, duck was engaged in a breeding activity."

QUOTED. "He shot both of them. He killed Flash, and the officer had to kill Chloe. I really don't understand why he shot them — they didn't deserve it."

— Waupaca, Wis., resident Megan Mischler, whose father shot her pet goats after his wife refused to bring him beer from the grocery.

But Mischler said her father was most angry about the mess the goats made earlier in the day.

Expert tips: clothing mishaps

Ever been in a situation in which the zipper on your new jeans breaks? Or do you need to move a button after Thanksgiving festivities?

Just because you popped a button or ripped a seam, it doesn't mean you need to go pick up a new outfit.

Cynthia Istook, an assistant professor at N.C. State University's textile and apparel school, offers these tips to help fix your clothing woes:

■ Buy a kit. Istook suggests the Witchery Stitchery set, which can easily hem any type of fabric requiring only an iron.

■ Go fish. A button falls off, and there is no time to manage it with a needle and thread. Simple supplies are easily found. Use fishing wire or even plastic strings to wire buttons into the clothing.

■ Hoard scrap fabric. Holes in pants can be embarrassing and hard to fix, but using patches to fix the holes is an efficient technique. Look for an old pair of jeans that match the tattered clothing and easily patch the scrap onto the hole using needle and thread.

■ Carry safety pins. If a zipper breaks and there is no time to fix it, safety pins can easily hold the zipper together. Pin beneath the flap so it is hidden.

■ Create a sewing kit. A simple pair of scissors and roll of thread quickly solve most fabric dilemmas. Keep several colors on hand.
