DAILY DOSE

If we don't 'turn it blue,' will Roy tie us?

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A 36-year-old Wisconsin man who allegedly tied up his 7-year-old son with tape after the boy refused to wear a Green Bay Packers sweatshirt after the divisional playoff game against Seattle said the incident was a joke blown out of proportion.

Matthew Kowald reportedly forced the sweatshirt on the boy, who told his father he refused to root for the Packers even after his father threatened to ground him. Columbia County Lt. Wayne Smith said Kowald kept the boy tied up for about an hour and taped the shirt to him.

"He wanted the juvenile to be a Packers fan, and I would suggest he went about it the wrong way," Smith said.

NOTED. A 36-year-old Colorado man pleaded guilty to animal cruelty for shooting the family dog because it stole food off his plate, The Denver Post reported.

Family members told deputies they saw the dog, named Lucky, take food off the man's plate while he was outside. When he found out, witnesses said, he took Lucky outside and shot him. Lucky survived the shooting.

QUOTED. "If there was a blond, half-naked chick running away from a guy with a chainsaw, I wouldn't stop."

— Calgary, Canada, resident Jason Brunelle, who was beaten by several men with bottles and metal rebar after he stopped his car to assist a motorist waving his arms outside a car with its hazard lights on, The Vancouver Sun reported. He said he won't be a Good Samaritan again.
