Professor, police took my homework

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A Florida community college student took a very wrong turn while trying to turn in an assignment. Authorities in Port St. Lucie, Fla., said a drunk college student who was attempting to hand in a paper for a class instead ended up in their parking lot.

Police reported that Joseph Burzynski, 19, was weaving his vehicle through the police department parking lot full of cruisers and almost hit a sergeant. When asked what he was doing, Burzynski told authorities he thought he was at Indian River Community College.

The 19-year-old's blood-alcohol level was reportedly more than twice the legal limit for driving. Burzynski was arrested on a DUI charge.

NOTED. A Michigan man was charged with drunken driving after drinking two bottles of wine, chugging through a snowstorm on his John Deere lawn tractor and riding down the center of the street to reach a liquor store, authorities said.

Police found Frank Kozumplik, 49, headed home Saturday night toting four bottles of wine behind his tractor in a paper bag.

QUOTED. "Now and then we've had a few issues there but not this kind of problem."

— Flint Township police Sgt. Tim Jones, after a brawl involving about 80 people erupted at a Chuck E. Cheese's, The Flint Journal reported.

A fight between three teenage girls became "a knock-down, drag-out between 75 and 80 people," police said. Pepper spray was used to calm the frenzied crowd.
